INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Canadian Research Index puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. This monthly indexing, abstracting and document delivery service covers all levels of government in Canada, as well as institutions receiving research grants. Most titles included in Microlog are available in either paper or microfiche format. Combined with a microfiche collection, the Microlog Service is a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications. The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document.

SCOPE

Among other documents, Microlog includes research papers in physical, natural and social sciences, policy papers, important statistics, and annual reports. Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the Checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by Microlog approximately two months after publication of the list.

LANGUAGE POLICY

Documents issued in English or French are indexed and abstracted in the language of publication, while bilingual documents are indexed and abstracted in both languages.

SOURCES AND COVERAGE

Federal Documents: The Microlog editors review all checklists issued by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre and order every document relevant to the service. Except for serials, maps, pamphlets, and manuals, all monographs covered by the Federal Depository Plan are included in the index. Also, a special effort is made to track down elusive but important titles which do not appear in the lists.

Microlog offers a special collection of documents published by the Federal Government but not issued through the Federal Depository Plan. These titles, available to subscribers as the Non-Depository Publications collection, are indicated in the Titles section by a bullet (•). Microlog is also the direct distributing agent for many government bodies.

Provincial Documents: Depository arrangements with several provincial libraries have been established to ensure that Microlog subscribers receive all publications from those provinces. Where no depository arrangement exists, all publications lists issued by the province are reviewed for acquisitions.

Municipal Documents: Since these titles are very difficult to obtain, the Microlog editors make special efforts to include publications from municipal sources.

ACCESS

The Index provides access by subject, corporate or individual author, and series title.

The full Microlog file from 1979 to date, consisting of almost 50,000 records, is available online through Can/OLE. This is an ideal way to locate hard-to-find reports which may then be ordered directly online through the Can/DOCS service. Contact: Can/OLE Client Services, CISTI, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0S2.

FEATURES

Microlog comprises the following sections:

1. Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.
2. Name Index: Access by personal author, corporate author, and conference name.
3. Series Titles: Lists by title and number all reports in series in the service; series are available as an ongoing subscription or retrospective collection.
4. Subject Index: Descriptors based on Library of Congress and Canadiana Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.
5. Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions. This section is included in the annual cumulation as a separate fished product.

MICROLOG AND CANADIAN STATISTICS INDEX

Statistical Material: The Canadian Statistics Index (CSI) provides further access to statistical material contained in Microlog monographs and special or annual reports. The CSI identification number has been included with the Microlog citation for the convenience of subscribers to the CSI fiche collection.

Annual Reports: Storage of annual reports in a single sequence has been a problem for clients in the past. The CSI numbers for annual reports are now listed in the bibliographic citation and appear on the microfiche header of each report, to make such sequencing possible.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

Institutions may subscribe to complete or partial collections of the documents in Microlog. Individual copies on microfiche or paper reprint may be ordered through Micromedia's Document Delivery Service. To order, please contact:

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. Combiné aux collections sur microfiches, le service Microlog constitue un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada, ainsi que celles des organismes qui reçoivent des subventions pour la recherche. Microlog est aussi un service de livraison de documents, sur microfiches ou sous forme imprimée.

CONTENU

Microlog contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels. Par l'intermédiaire du service Microlog, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

POLITIQUE LINGUISTIQUE

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

SOURCES

Publications fédérales: Les rédacteurs de Microlog examinent les listes émises par le Centre d'édition du gouvernement du Canada et commandent les documents pertinents. En dehors des publications en série, cartes, brochures et manuels, toutes les monographies régies par le Programme de dépôt du gouvernement fédéral figurent dans l'index, ainsi que des ouvrages importants ne figurant pas sur les listes.

Microlog propose aussi une collection spéciale de publications fédérales non déposées, identifiées par un point (●) dans la section Titres et résumés. Microlog est aussi l'agent de diffusion de nombreux organismes gouvernementaux.

Publications provinciales: Des ententes de dépôt ont été conclues avec plusieurs bibliothèques provinciales pour que les abonnés de Microlog reçoivent toutes les publications de ces provinces. Lorsqu'aucune entente n'existe, les listes de publications émises par les provinces sont examinées afin d'acquérir les documents.

Publications municipales: Ces ouvrages étant difficiles à se procurer, les rédacteurs de Microlog redoublent d'ardeur pour les inclure dans l'index.

ACCÈS

L'index imprimé est bilingue et les publications sont répertoriées par sujet, par auteur (collectivité et personne physique) et par titre de collection.

Le fichier complet de Microlog, de 1979 à aujourd'hui, contient près de 50,000 notices et est accessible sur

Can/OLE. Il s'agit d'un moyen idéal pour mettre la main sur des rapports difficiles à trouver qu'on peut commander par l'intermédiaire du service Can/DOCS. À ce propos, veuillez vous adresser au Service à la clientèle Can/OLE, ICIST, Ottawa (Ontario), K1A 0S2.

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Microlog est divisé en cinq sections:

1. Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.
2. Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur, collectivité-auteur et titre de conférence.
3. Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces collections peuvent être commandées individuellement.
4. Index des matières: les descripteurs permettent de trouver facilement les publications pertinentes; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.
5. Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés. Dans la refonte, cette section est insérée sous forme de microfiches.

MICROLOG ET L'INDEX DES STATISTIQUES DU CANADA

Données statistiques: L'Index des statistiques du Canada (CSI) constitue une autre source de référence sur les statistiques contenues dans certaines publications indexées dans Microlog. Celles-ci ont un numéro d'ordre spécial qui est inclus dans la référence bibliographique.

Rapports annuels: Afin de rendre le classement des rapports annuels plus facile, le numéro d'ordre CSI correspondant à ces documents figure maintenant dans les références bibliographiques et est inscrit sur les en-têtes de microfiches.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

On peut s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de Microlog. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

"How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?"

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

"Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?"

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

STEP 2/DEUXIÈME ÉTAPE

A unified search strategy

The search strategy should include all the monthly issues. Start with the most recent issue and work back.
Monthly issues are cumulated annually.

Établir une stratégie de recherche unifiée

La stratégie de recherche doit tenir compte de toutes les publications mensuelles, à commencer par les plus récentes. Chaque année, ces publications font l'objet d'une refonte.

STEP 3/TROISIÈME ÉTAPE

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

1990 and 1991 experimental commercial jig fishery for neon flying squid (Ommastrephes bartramii) off the west coast of British Columbia

By William Shaw and Barry D. Smith. Nanaimo, BC : Dept. of Fisheries & Oceans, Science Branch, Pacific Biological Station, 1995. viii, 68 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl. (Canadian technical report of fisheries and aquatic sciences / Canada. Dept. of Fisheries & Oceans ; no. 2045 ISSN 0706-6457) CCG-P no. FS. 97-6/2045E MICROLOG 95-07361 (1 fiche)

A joint Canada/Japan experimental commercial jig fishery for neon flying squid occurred off the west coast of Canada in 1990 and 1991. The purpose of this experiment was to determine the distribution and abundance of neon flying squid off the west coast of Canada in relation to environmental and oceanographic factors; to assess the effectiveness of jigs in catching large squid; to determine the bycatch associated with jigging; to collect biological data on flying squid and bycatch species; and to introduce Japanese commercial squid jigging equipment and procedures to the Canadian fishing industry. This report presents information on the fishing gear, methodology of jigging, catch and effort for squid and other species, and distribution of squid in relation to both environmental and oceanic processes.

This report describes study methods and presents results of spring and fall field studies of coho salmon at Black Creek on north central Vancouver Island. Researchers trapped, clipped, and marked coho smolts leaving the creek between April and June, and recorded such data as fish counts, age, length and weight, trapping efficiency, and tag retention. An adult enumeration fence operated October to December, as well as visual surveys upstream from the fence, were used to monitor coho escapements to the creek. Escapement data presented includes population estimates derived using three methods; age, length, and sex composition, and tag recoveries.

1993 Saint John River flood studies

Fredericton : New Brunswick Power Corporation ; Niagara Falls, Ont. : Acres International Limited, 1995. 114 p. : ill., Bibl. MICROLOG 95-06803 (2 fiche)

This report describes the technical analyses carried out for the ice jam events occurring in the headpond reaches at the Beechwood and Mactaquac hydroelectric plants on the Saint John River, New Brunswick, in April 1993. The objective of this work was to review the ice jam events in order to verify and/or modify the spring breakup headpond operating guidelines established on the basis of previous breakup experience. The analyses re-evaluated how ice jams actually develop and how the previously used ICESIM model simulates ice jams in the headponds, which led to development of new concepts and analytic tools to assist in evaluation of ice jam lodgement and grounding. The report includes analyses of eight selected 1993 jams using the modified ICESIM model and a review of the existing operating guidelines in view of the new developments and analyses. Finally, the report outlines the evaluation of several structural and operational considerations such as the impact of the Irving Piers and of receiving ice from the Aroostook River.

Edmonton : The Committee, 1995. 11 p.
MICROLOG 95-06920 (1 fiche)

The Committee reviews and inspects all social care facilities, observing the manner in which they operate. These visits bring members into contact with hundreds of Albertans as either users or providers of Social Services programs and facilities. In this report, the Committee has assembled a summary of its activities together with observations on how the public is being served by the programs supported and licensed by Social Services. It also gives a summary of recommendations, and information on complaints received, a visit summary and the location of the Committee office.

Alberta's role in federal immigration policy : a proposal

Alberta. Alberta Advanced Education & Career Development. Edmonton : The Dept., 1995. 10 p.
MICROLOG 95-06904 (1 fiche)

Immigration is mainly under federal jurisdiction, but there are provisions in the Immigration Act for the provinces to have bilateral agreements with the federal government. This document discusses Alberta's role in the federal government's new immigration strategy, giving the province's response to the federal report entitled Into the 21st Century: A Strategy for Immigration and Citizenship. The document outlines the principles guiding Alberta's response to that strategy, then presents the federal objective along with Alberta's proposed position on immigrant characteristics, immigrant selection criteria, settlement services, immigrant sponsorship, and issues of admission, health screening, and enforcement.

MICROLOG 95-06805 (1 fiche)

The New Brunswick municipalities of Belledune and Jacquet River and the Local Service District of Armstrong Brook have been considering amalgamation of their communities for some time. This report reviews the feasibility of amalgamating those communities together with additional territories in the Local Service Districts of Durham Parish and the Parish of Beresford. The report profiles the communities involved, notes the boundaries of the proposed amalgamation, outlines current services including fire protection and waste disposal, and discusses fiscal considerations related to providing an equitable level of services to all residents of the expanded and amalgamated community. The report concludes by presenting recommendations regarding the amalgamation from various provincial agencies and departments.

Analysis of 1990 sprain and strain injuries in Ontario

Toronto : Workplace Health & Safety Agency, 1995. 39 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-07121 (1 fiche)

Historically, the largest category of lost time injuries in Ontario has been sprains and strains. This study uses Ontario workers' compensation data to generate hypotheses concerning task factors for occupational sprains and strains. The study uses cross-tabulations to calculate various statistics such as odds ratios, 95% confidence intervals, p-values, attributable risks, and number of injuries attributable. Results discussed include the relationship between sprain/strain injuries and such factors as time of occurrence in the work shift, age and sex of worker, occupation, and type of activity.

Previous studies in this research concerned with modelling the Arctic ambient noise and localizing active pressure ridges outlined a broad band focalization technique and examined six different processors used to match measured and modelled coherence. This previous work relied on matched field processing on a vertical linear array for estimating source strengths and ranges while maximum likelihood plane wave beamforming was performed on a horizontal L-shaped array in the matched field processing. This report describes results of a third study in which focalization is used to find the range, bearing, and relative strength of all sources using both the vertical and horizontal arrays. The technique of focalization is used which estimates source locations using matched field processing when the bathymetry is only approximately known.

Analysis of options for the future of the Petitcodiac River Dam and Causeway : a report

A causeway divides the Petitcodiac River in New Brunswick from the Petitcodiac estuary. The causeway consists of five sluice gates and an adjacent fishway. Its effects on the river and the natural and economic environment of the area have been debated since its construction. Accordingly, the provincial government requested a review of the options for the future of the Petitcodiac dam and causeway. This report presents the findings of that review, including definition of the different options, the issues concerning each option, background on the history of the structure, and recommendations regarding each option. The options evaluated include maintaining the status quo, operation of gates to help fish passage, new fishway design, fish trap and transport, keeping the gates open, replacement of the causeway by a bridge, and separation of the dam and causeway.

An Analysis of the potential for community forestry in New Brunswick

By Matthew Betts. Fredericton : Natural Resources Canada, Canadian Forest Service, Maritimes Region, 1995. vi, 325 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl. MICROLOG 95-06897 (4 fiche)

Community forestry is a form of forest practice and administration in which all forest management occurs within the bounds of sustainable forestry, the community is empowered to make major land use decisions collectively, and some form of community economic development occurs as a result. This thesis reviews the concept of community forestry as reflected in the literature and in practice across Canada. It then describes the methodology and results obtained in an evaluation of case studies of two existing community forest initiatives in New Brunswick, the Irishtown Reservoir Forest and the Eel Ground Forest. These initiatives are evaluated in terms of community empowerment, sustainable forestry, and community economic development. The thesis concludes with an assessment of the potential for community forestry in New Brunswick.

The main purpose of mini-frac tests is to obtain an estimate of the minimum principal in-situ stress within a reservoir prior to any large-scale hydraulic fracturing operation. These tests help to optimize fracturing operations and avoid undesirable effects and to obtain information on maximum injection pressure and on the geomechanical state of the formation being fractured. This manual compiles information on various aspects of mini-frac testing and in-situ stress measurement techniques for easy accessibility. Chapters of the manual cover the theory of fracturing, stress alteration in boreholes, mini-frac test procedures in cased and uncased holes, analysis and interpretation of test results, factors affecting test results, and advances in in-situ stress measurements. Case studies are used to illustrate how mini-frac field test results were interpreted to acquire information in in-situ stress and other reservoir parameters.

Application of geographic information technology to prepare seabed data for 3-D sonar modelling

By Eric W. Holm. Dartmouth, NS : National Defence, Research & Development Branch, Defence Research Establishment Atlantic, 1994. iii, 24 p. : ill., Bibl. (DREA contractor report / Defence Research Establishment Atlantic ; DREA CR/94/437) MICROLOG 95-07402 (1 fiche)

Assuming that the effects of horizontal refraction are negligible, two-dimensional (range-dependent) sonar performance prediction models may be extended to the three-dimensional environment by considering a number of radials from the sonar location. A major difficulty of this approach is the manipulation of spatial data in order to supply the two-dimensional model with input. To this end, geographic information system (GIS) technology is being extended to manipulate raster maps of the environment parameters and output the information in a form appropriate for two-dimensional acoustic models. This report describes the program "d.radials," an extension to the GRASS GIS system implemented to process generic seabed data in a format required by the KRAKEN normal mode model. The description includes system set-up requirements and components, software installation, functions provided, input required, and output format. Sample screens are included. Aquathermolysis refers to an overall set of chemical processes that can result from contacting heavy oil or oil sands with high-temperature water, whatever the phase. This review attempts to demonstrate the role of aquathermolysis in the performance of in-situ steam stimulation of heavy oil or oil sand deposits. The review first presents an overview of what is believed are the main components of the aquathermolysis system of chemical reactions and illustrates how these reactions fit together. The review then presents a series of chapters, each dealing with a specific feature of the aquathermolysis phenomenon and including supporting evidence for the general picture offered in the overview. The review also attempts to show how these features of aquathermolysis can affect such matters as production of hydrogen sulfide gas, viscosity of produced oil, and maturation of the regions of the reservoir around the production zone.

The abundance and types of benthic invertebrates at a site can often indicate the extent to which the aquatic environment has been affected by pollutants. This report presents results from a study of benthic invertebrates collected from depositional areas in May 1993 at eight sites on the upper Athabasca River near Hinton, Alberta, and from seven similar sites in September 1993. Information collected includes invertebrate counts and identifications, and the abundance and types of invertebrates present at each site. This information will be evaluated and compared with previous studies on the Athabasca River to document changes in benthic invertebrate populations over time and to determine whether populations have been affected by man-made discharges to the river.

Assessment of ill-structured problems with forced classification analysis : two examples

Designed to illustrate the use of forced classification to ill-structured problems. There are 2 illustrations: 1 involves 156 discussions, by grade 3 and 6 students, taken in groups of about 5. The discussions deal with a family situation. The 2d illustration involves 29 think-aloud responses, by practising or aspiring elementary school principals, to a case-study of school facilities and staff conflict. This report focuses on the method of analysis that was used, not on the substance of the problems addressed by the subjects. Describes how the statements are categorized and rated, discusses results, and states that the potential of this technique lies in the identification of elements in responses to ill-structured problems that distinguish subjects. The technique is applicable to essays, oral examinations, think-aloud analyses, and other ill-structured problems.

Grilse are Atlantic salmon which mature in less than two full winters at sea. Grilising, or precocious maturation, is a natural adaptive process enabling survival of the species in a variable environment, and is a consequence of the interactions of genetic and environmental effects and husbandry practices. Grilising creates technical and economic difficulties when cultured fish are affected. This document presents the proceedings of a workshop held to review factors affecting grilising in Atlantic salmon and to identify possible strategies to minimize grilising impacts. Topics of workshop presentations include the life history of Atlantic salmon, the genetic basis of grilising, environmental influences on grilising, impacts of husbandry practices on grilising, experiences with grilising in Canada and other countries, strategies for incorporating grilise in fish production, and strategies for avoiding grilising.

The auxiliary, among other tasks, will perform clerical work, organize materials, research appropriate resources, and provide individual or group assistance. The teacher is then free to concentrate on teaching. An emerging category, the education assistant, can assist the teacher in creating and implementing behaviour-change programs and programs to add or augment skills. The British Columbia seafood industry has traditionally enjoyed an abundance of water and seafood resources, and easy access to disposal facilities. The recent unpredictability of quality water and resources and the higher cost of waste disposal has significant implications for the industry's continued prosperity. Reducing waste and wastewater has a dramatic effect on the cost-effectiveness and competitiveness of a seafood plant. This document is a technical reference outlining strategies and techniques for reducing water use and wastewater, selecting the most efficient processing equipment and operating procedures, and staff training to increase plant efficiency. Sections of the document cover such areas of plant operation as water handling, flumes, conveying, pumping, and raw material quality. A case study is appended.

A Biophysical model for prehistoric archaeological sites in southern Ontario

By Penny M. Young...et al. Downsview, ON : Ministry of Transportation, Research & Development Branch, 1995. viii, 73 p. : Maps, Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-07311 (1 fiche)

The purpose of this project was to evaluate the ability of the professional field of archaeology to develop predictive methodologies with which to determine the archaeological potential of aggregate resources. The study used data bases available from four Ontario regional municipalities and was based on existing archaeological assessment research and site location data. The investigators analyzed site (point) and land parcel data statistically. Data considered relevant for prehistoric southern Ontario populations included information on soil types, aggregates, geomorphologic features, distance to water, and wildlife potential. The statistical analysis led to an evaluation of the relative importance of particular features in determining the location of archaeological sites. The paper proposes a model for archaeological sites of significant size and notes six types of information for assessing the archaeological potential and mitigation requirements of a parcel of land.

MICROLOG 95-07077 (1 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

This report describes the method and rationale that were used to interface the BIRIS three-dimensional laser range sensor to a multiprocessor system that runs under the Harmony realtime operating system. The report is primarily concerned with a description of a server that presents to the application programmer a clear abstraction of the BIRIS system so that control of the device and access to its data are uncomplicated. The system described is a component of a mobile robot system being developed by the Autonomous Systems Laboratory at the National Research Council. The appendix includes design details of the BIRIS server and outlines proposed changes to the next generation BIRIS system.

This document begins with a history of the G-7 Summits since the first meeting in France in 1975. It then discusses issues other than economic ones that have been addressed at these summits, including nuclear safety, nuclear proliferation, environmental issues, and transnational organized crime, and also outlines the international economic control mechanisms of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. The document reviews the agenda for the 1995 G-7 Summit in Halifax and Canada's participation in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and in the World Trade Organization. The document ends with profiles of the G-7 countries, including their trade and investment in Canada, bilateral relations with Canada, and current issues facing the country.

The Canadian Wheat Board is the sole supplier of wheat, durum, and milling barley to millers and maltsters in Canada. Past Board/industry relationships have worked well, but a number of new industries have developed that may work better if not under Board control. This report presents the results and recommendations of a study conducted to develop ways in which the Board could better facilitate value-added processing in Canada. It reviews the state of the value-added grain processing industry, including flour millers, small millers and grain processors, maltsters, the organic food industry, and industrial buyers of Board-supplied grains. It also examines the attitudes of these sectors toward, and problems with, Board policies. The recommendations relate to such matters as communication, pooled price transparency, Board investments, exemptions from Board control, and market development programs. AG CA CO ND SC

This report examines characterization of irritants by gas chromatography/tandem mass spectrometry (GC-MS/MS) as a technique for selective identification of such compounds in samples collected by Canadian Forces in an intelligence gathering role. The investigators obtained daughter spectra for the molecular and principal electron impact fragmentation ions of four irritants: 1-methoxy cycloheptatriene, 2-chloroacetophenone, o-chlorobenzylidene malonitrile, and dibenz(b,f)-1,4-oxazepin, during capillary column GC-MS/MS analysis. The use of standardized collisional activated dissociation cell conditions resulted in the acquisition of reproducible daughter spectra suitable for identification and data base generation. The level of sensitivity obtained was about the same as that routinely obtained for other chemical warfare agents during capillary column GC-MS analysis of standards under electron impact ionization conditions. This paper examines the question whether the provinces will continue to follow the health policy approach of the Canada Health Act in the absence of federal grants (the carrot) or the threat of withholding of cash transfers to enforce adherence to the Act (the stick). The paper first reviews early legislation regarding publicly funded health insurance and federal-provincial cooperation in health care, then examines changes in federal transfers since 1978. The problems resulting when the provinces were free of administrative restrictions of earlier health acts led to passage of the Canada Health Act in 1987, and the paper reviews enforcement of the Act in light of such problems as extra billing, delisting of services, and portability. The paper ends by discussing the future of federal health policy with an expected end of federal transfers. The appendix includes the text of the Canada Health Act. CO HE JU ON PA PR SS

They carried out the same investigations in 1994 and compared the findings to those from 1977-79 in order to confirm qualitative observations concerning changes in substrate types which might be associated with observed changes in invertebrate abundances. The report pays particular attention to abundance and distribution of the amphipod Corophium volutator.

The Canadian economy is currently in transition from a period of disinflation to one with a very low and relatively stable inflation rate. Against this background, this paper examines whether reduced-form parameters should be expected to be invariant to changes in the inflation process. The specific issues are whether shifts in the Canadian inflation process can be identified over time, and whether there is evidence that parameter instability corresponds to shifts in the inflation regime. The author examines the time-series properties of the inflation rate using an autoregressive model and uses the Chow test to provide evidence of parameter instability. Formal unit-root tests are used to test the stationarity of the inflation rate, and a two-state Markov switching model is used to detect shifts in the inflation process.

Classification des cours d'eau : la protection des lacs et des rivières du Nouveau-Brunswick : document de réflexion

Ce document de réflexion est un genre de cahier d'exercice qui fournit de l'information sur un nouveau programme visant à maintenir, à protéger ou à améliorer la qualité de l'eau, des lacs et des rivières de la province. Il s'agit du Programme de classification des cours d'eau et d'un outil de gestion des bassins hydrographiques. On propose que certains lacs et rivières de la province soient protégés dans une catégorie spéciale appelée Lacs et rivières exceptionnels. On explique un processus de désignation des lacs et des rivières exceptionnels. Le document présente les critères de sélection de ces cours d'eau. Il explique aussi comment la qualité de l'eau d'un lac ou d'une rivière exceptionnel serait protégée. Le document explique aussi comment le système de classification des cours d'eau peut servir à gérer et à protéger les autres catégories de réseaux fluviaux dans la province. Quatre catégories, en plus de la catégorie des cours d'eau exceptionnels y sont décrites. Un glossaire des termes techniques figurant dans le texte est présenté à la fin du document.

This report describes tools for simulating complex non-speech time series data of the type received by a hydrophone and a backpropagation artificial neural network for classifying the data. These tools can be used to investigate the utility of applying neural networks to the classification of passive sonar data. The tools use the Cmusound synthesis program for simulating the sounds received by a hydrophone. The neural network has three user interfaces, one graphical and two in the TTY mode for running experiments and on multiple platforms. The report includes a review of the artificial neural network approach, description of the neural network methods and tools, and an outline of the simulation of passive sonar signals.

Clean vehicles and fuels policy for British Columbia : a policy paper

Victoria : Ministry of Environment, Lands & Parks, 1995. 34 p. : ill., Bibl. ISBN 0-7726-2419-4
MICROLOG 95-06843 (1 fiche)

This paper describes the current state of air pollution in British Columbia, with a focus on pollution from vehicles in the lower Fraser Valley airshed. The paper notes current and future trends in air quality in the Greater Vancouver Regional District and describes government initiatives such as the Clean Air Strategy. The focus of the paper is on the province's Clean Vehicles and Fuels Program, which has the goal of improving and sustaining air quality, particularly in urban areas. The program seeks to reduce direct transportation emissions, with priority to reducing fine particulates, greenhouse gases, and ground-level ozone. The paper describes a range of initiatives in the program, including vehicle emissions inspection and maintenance programs, fuel conversion programs, new low-emission vehicle standards, encouragement of alternative fueled vehicles and cleaner fuels, and efforts to recover service station gasoline vapors.

This report presents an action plan to restore the polluted waterways and waterfront in the Metropolitan Toronto area, from Etobicoke Creek in the west to the Rouge River in the east. After an introduction on the planning process, the plan reviews problems and suggests priorities for action in the following areas of concern: stormwater management, sewage treatment, control of non-residential sewer use, restoring fish and wildlife habitat, public awareness and education, legislation and environmental policy, land use planning, monitoring, and research. The plan then gives specific recommendations for remedial actions and implementation through community involvement. The final section of the report describes the history of the Metro Toronto watersheds and their environmental health.

In 1974, a survey of uranium mine employees examined the effect of the occupational environment with respect to chronic lung disease among persons employed underground and in the surface crushers and mills. This report describes a study of a random selection of 733 of the 973 participants in the 1974 survey. The goal of this study was to investigate lung cancer incidence following that survey in relation to measures obtained at the 1974 survey. This follow-up sample has replicated many of the findings of previous studies and has also produced some new information, including results of analyses incorporating cigarette smoking as well as measurements of lung function and radiographic silicosis.

Co-ordinated beaver control strategy : final report and recommendations

Prepared by: Rob Esaiw... et al. Prince Albert, SK : Saskatchewan Environment & Resource Management, 1994. iii, 50 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-07027 (1 fiche)

In 1994, a new coordinated strategy for controlling beaver populations was implemented in Saskatchewan. The strategy was designed to streamline existing government programs by establishing a series of steps to be followed by landowners seeking assistance for beaver-related flooding problems. This report summarizes activities carried out to date under that strategy, including various pilot projects involving water control structures, removal of beaver populations in approved channel areas, and trials of alternative methods of administering beaver removal. The report concludes with recommendations regarding water control structure installation, beaver removal subsidies, channel clearing, and alternative methods of beaver population control. Appendices include literature on beaver pond levelers and culvert screens used to maintain water flow.

This report describes a pilot project conducted as part of the 1994 Saskatchewan strategy for coordinated control of beaver populations. The site selected was Melfort Creek, an area affected by extensive flooding indicative of a waterway with a chronic beaver problem. The report describes the six sub-areas of the pilot project site, noting their vegetation, wildlife, beaver activity, and proposed management plan for controlling the effects of beaver populations. Costs associated with these plans are also given. Management practices used in the plans include blasting of beaver dams, installation of pond levelers, and provision of beaver removal services. Appendices list the species found in the study areas and describe the use of beaver pond levelers and culvert screens for maintaining water flow.

As part of Saskatchewan's 1994 coordinated strategy for controlling beavers, Saskatchewan Environment and Resource Management selected Oscar Creek as a pilot project site. The farmlands surrounding the site have an extensive history of flooding problems, indicating a waterway with a chronic beaver problem. This report describes the Oscar Creek project, including the characteristics of the site and the four study areas within the site. Information for each study area includes description of the vegetation, wildlife, beaver activity, and chronic problem areas, as well as the proposed management plan and its costs. Activities to be conducted for the project include installation of pond levelers and culvert screens, blasting of beaver dams, and provision of beaver removal services. Appendices include lists of species found in the study area and descriptions of beaver pond levelers and culvert screens.

Le séminaire de l'accessibilité du transport a fourni une tribune pour un échange d'expériences sur un large éventail de questions liées à l'accessibilité des transports pour les personnes handicapées. Les objectifs étaient les suivants: fournir une occasion d'échanger des renseignements et de discuter de leur expérience sur des façons d'améliorer l'accessibilité des transports, comparer les pratiques en Amérique du nord et en Europe, examiner les progrès réalisés, les tendances, les nouvelles initiatives et les possibilités de collaboration future. Le Colloque comportait une exposition sur les technologies et les services où les participants pouvaient examiner des fourgonnettes, des élévateurs et des autobus adaptés. Pendant le Colloque, on a examiné des positions de principe, l'analyse de l'application de politiques (sécurité aérienne, services de transport ferroviaires, autocars interurbains, nolisés et de tourisme), le cadre législatif et réglementaire, technologies du transport accessible (réseau de communications visuelles, système d'information et de sécurité à l'intérieur des wagons de métro; fabrication de taxis accessibles; commandes amovibles pour automobiles; et mobiloop, système de correction auditive à bord des véhicules destinés aux personnes malentendantes), possibilités de consultation et de motivation (planification des transports pour leur accessibilité, personnes âgées et les handicaps), et initiatives en matière d'accessibilité (intégration des transports accessibles, R-D, et le Programme de transport des personnes à mobilité réduite dans les régions rurales du Manitoba).

Commercial realtime software needs different configuration management

This paper explains why integrated, monolithic configuration management is not well-suited to commercial realtime systems. The paper then describes an alternative approach to configuration management that has been found to be effective and widely useable. This approach, called Database and Selectors Cel (DaSC), uses the conventional tree-structured file system as its bases and separates treatment of versions that exist simultaneously from the evolution of those versions over time. Versions that exist simultaneously are represented by selectors from a common database, and evolution is represented by layers as in the film animator's cel. The paper notes the ways in which DaSC differs from traditional configuration management.

This report presents results of a study conducted to examine the effect of commercial thinning and fertilizing of lodgepole pine on attack by mountain pine beetle (Dendroctonus ponderosa Hopk.). At three study sites in the Cranbrook and Invermere Forest Districts of British Columbia, the researchers compared three harvesting treatments to an uncut control: a clearcut and commercial thins leaving trees at about 4- or 5-meter spacings. Equipment used included conventional hand-felling plus line skidders and crawler tractors, or mechanical systems including a feller-buncher, grapple-skidder, and excavator-mounted processor. The report documents the productivity and costs of the commercial thinning and clearcut harvesting operations, and compares the productivity of the equipment and practices used during the harvesting phase on each treatment. It also examines the operational feasibility of commercial thinning.

Parallel local search techniques can be divided into three categories: low-level parallelization strategies such as master-slave schemes; solution-space partitioning methods; and multi-thread procedures in which several processes explore concurrently the same search space. The multi-thread technique can be further subdivided into independent and cooperative search thread algorithms. This paper focuses on cooperative multi-thread heuristics applied to methods such as tabu search, and attempts to identify the key questions to be addressed in the design of any algorithm in this class. Of particular interest are questions related to inter-agent communications as a central element in the algorithmic design of these methods.

The study first analyzes the world textile fiber industry, describing production and processing methods, agronomic characteristics, market shares and trends, and relevance to the cottonized flax fiber market of cotton, ramie, hemp, and polyester, as well as traditional flax production. The study then examines the cottonized flax industry, with a review of non-traditional flax fiber processing systems and an assessment of current and potential new users, processors, and fiber flax farmers. The report concludes with an evaluation of the feasibility of producing cottonized flax fiber in Saskatchewan and the type of work needed to help develop a flax fiber industry in the province.

The Deadman River watershed is located in south central British Columbia, and concerns have been expressed about the channel instability occurring within a 30-kilometer-long area of the river. This report summarizes the physical setting of the watershed, including physiography, geology, climatology, hydrology, vegetative cover, and land use, and presents results of a channel stability assessment carried out using air photo analysis and field inspection. The report identifies changes in stream channel morphometry or stability over the period of airphoto record, assesses the factors responsible for the changes, and recommends mitigation options and management practices. Impacts on fisheries habitat are also examined and recommendations are made for future studies.

Depression is one of the most common psychiatric illnesses, and its effects signify considerable costs to individuals and society in terms of suffering, lost activity, and premature death. This overview of the literature is intended to address the need to bring together many different facets of this subject and increase understanding of this mental disorder. The overview attempts to balance medical perspectives on depressive disorders and a psychosocial understanding of the illness. Sections of the overview cover such topics as types of depression, factors involved in depression (genetic, biological, psychosocial), prevalence among different groups (women, children, seniors, adolescents, disabled), the relation of depression to other illnesses, consequences and costs of depression, and treatment. The appendix includes a directory of organizations that deal with depression.

The objectives of the study are to identify indicators, collect data, and identify information gaps and research needs regarding such forest outputs as clean air and water, biodiversity, and tourism income. The approach used includes development of a decision framework, a natural resource account, and a matrix of assets, and identification of input/output indicators. The main focus of data collection was on economic impacts and values, primarily limited to outputs which are exchanged in the market.

Development of a technique for void detection and structural evaluation of wood members, phase I : research and development

Fungal attack in wood products and trees will lead to creation of internal voids not visible on the outside. This report describes experiments conducted to verify a stress wave technique for detecting such internal voids. Such a technique would be useful for evaluating the internal conditions of structural wood members. The investigators examined both rectangular and round specimens of eastern spruce and Douglas fir, with five void ratios and different cross sectional sizes. The technique involves impacting one side of the object to be tested with a hammer and measuring both the transit time of the stress wave and the direction of arrival of the first wave. The report notes the minimum void ratio that the technique can detect reliably and the importance of wave direction as an indication of the presence of a void.

In the first phase of this study, a stress wave technique was developed for the detection of internal voids of structural wood members and living trees. This report of the second phase of the study describes a major improvement of the prototype constructed to make use of this technique. The improvement includes the use of an electronically controlled impact device, which has significantly improved the prototype's operation and accuracy. In addition, calculation procedures have been incorporated into an electronic processor which forms part of the prototype. The device displays two pieces of information from each test: the time in microseconds taken by the wave to travel between the impact point and receiving transducer, and the direction of arrival of the first wave. Comparing measurements obtained from a number of locations on the test object enables deductions to be made with respect to the object's internal condition.

Correlational reasoning is an essential element of many school subjects and everyday problem solving. Although a number of studies have been conducted in the domain, they do not comprise a sound research base for developing instruction. First, coverage of correlational reasoning has been incomplete and inconsistent across studies. Second, a shared conception of student growth in these skills has not emerged. Third, the few attempts to improve performance have been isolated and the most successful have involved one-to-one treatments not easily transferred from the research laboratory to the classroom. Deficiencies in prior research were addressed in 6 studies. Describes each study and outlines the purposes of the research: to develop appropriate instructional strategies; and to investigate the impact of student interaction processes on cognitive achievement in peer mediated instructional treatments.

In 1994, the Alberta Ministers of Labour and Health established a committee to address health workforce related issues and challenges identified as potential barriers to health reform initiatives. In addressing these issues, the ministers asked the committee to propose a method of regulating health service providers that would protect the public, improve choice and access, eliminate unnecessary regulation, ensure consistency and regulatory accountability, and promote collaboration and effective partnerships. The committee was also asked to propose alternative approaches to workforce utilization in service delivery, including a review of funding systems. This document presents the findings of the committee in its consultation with the public and with associations, agencies, and institutions. Issues considered include the regulation of practice, the health regulatory system, and delivery of health services.

Economic evaluation of the northern spotted owl management options for British Columbia

Victoria : Ministry of Forests ; Ministry of Environment, Lands & Parks, 1995. iv, 35 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-07463 (1 fiche)

This report presents an economic evaluation of the northern spotted owl management options developed by the Canadian Spotted Owl Recovery Team (SORT). The evaluation provides the economic opportunity costs of each option and is concerned with the economic efficiency effects of the options on the well-being of the British Columbia population. The report reviews the economics of species preservation and includes preservation values obtained in various spotted owl studies in the United States. The SORT management options give a range of survival probabilities, rather than being based on an all-or-nothing premise of either preservation or extinction, as done in most other studies. The problem addressed is the determination of the incremental cost that society must be willing to accept in order to improve the probability of spotted owl survival. The costs of the options were calculated as the foregone opportunity cost to society of future reduced timber harvests.

Mechanical short-wood harvesters are designed to fell, delimb, top, and buck trees at the stump. These harvesters are very high-tech pieces of equipment with components not normally found in traditional forestry equipment. In Atlantic Canada, owners and operators of mechanical short-wood harvesters have received little or no formal training in how to use and repair such equipment. This report presents the results of a study conducted to examine how existing short-wood harvester owners and operators managed the transition to this modern technology without the benefits of formal training, and to identify necessary training requirements. The study included a literature review, with comparisons to Scandinavian practice, and a survey of Atlantic Canada harvesting contractors and operators. The study also developed a diagnostic tool for helping to determine an individual's poten-

The investigators monitored 11 study sites 1985-94 to assess the effects of various rates of glyphosate applications on the vegetation of forest ecosystems. They established control (unsprayed) and treated sampling sites in two recently burned areas, a mature aspen stand, a forest plantation, and an area where an accidental spill of glyphosate had occurred in the past. They established a separate study to specifically address the effects of glyphosate on available ungulate browse material, collecting data on available browse from six forage species in the burn and aspen stand areas. The results presented include comparisons of plant growth in the treated and untreated areas.

La présente brochure est conçue comme un ouvrage de référence d'usage facile concernant les effets de la fumée du tabac sur le fœtus, le nourrisson et l'enfant. Elle est destinée à fournir un aperçu des conclusions tirées des recherches plutôt que des renseignements médicaux détaillés. Les chapitres résument sous une forme concise les conclusions des recherches sur les effets sur la santé telles que faible poids de naissance, avortement spontané, placenta praevia, mortalité fœtale et périnatale, grossesse ectopique ou extra-utérine, malformations congénitales, atteinte respiratoire aigue, asthme, toux, hyperactivité des bronches, affections de l'oreille moyenne, et comportement tabagique futur. Dans le chapitre 4, la brochure aborde la question de l'exposition à la fumée secondaire et des politiques relatives au tabagisme dans les milieux de garde d'enfants. Un glossaire est inclus.

This book attempts to assemble the salient features of electrokinetic transport phenomena into a single text useful for students and engineers. Chapters of the book cover the colloidal state and its implications, electrostatics, transport equations in electrolytic solutions, electrokinetic phenomena in general, electroosmosis and streaming potential phenomena, electrophoresis, sedimentation potential, dispersion forces, coagulation of particles, and deposition of colloidal particles. The final chapter illustrates applications of electrokinetic principles such as electrokinetic salt rejection in porous media, electroosmotic control of hazardous wastes, iontophoretic delivery of drugs, flotation of oil droplets, and bitumen extraction from oil sands. Includes author and subject indexes.

Home for a person with special needs may be a single-family dwelling, apartment, condominium, mobile home or a shared residential complex. A person with special needs may also live alone, with relatives, friends or other residents. Realistic preparedness planning should be based on your specific circumstances and needs. The guidelines in this book are designed to help your own individual/family emergency plan. Included in separate units are general suggestions as well as special tips for persons with specific needs. The emphasis is on self-sufficiency and home preparedness in the event of an emergency. Information on several commonly experienced emergencies throughout Manitoba is also provided: fire, winter storms, floods, tornadoes, lightning and hazardous materials accidents.

The EnerGuide Program is designed to help consumers choose home appliances that are energy efficient. The Program has two goals: to protect the environment by reducing the demand for electricity in Canada, and to help consumers spend less money on electricity. Seven categories of appliances have been tested and rated under the program according to their electricity consumption: refrigerators, freezers, cooking appliances, dishwashers, clothes washers, clothes dryers, and combination washer-dryers. The test results allow comparison of the electricity consumption used by appliance models with similar features, when they are operated under the same conditions. Information in the guide includes appliance brand and label number, other identifying characteristics such as capacity, and yearly energy consumption in kilowatt hours. For dishwashers, hot water consumption is also given.

The mink is considered a good candidate species for monitoring pulp mill contaminants in wildlife since it is associated with aquatic ecosystems and is a top trophic level species that feeds on aquatic prey and readily accumulates environmental pollutants. This report presents results from a study of environmental contaminants in mink collected at sites downstream of pulp mills on the Wapiti River and Athabasca River, and at sites on the Peace-Athabasca delta. The investigators analyzed mink liver samples for dioxins/furans, chlorinated phenolics, organochlorine pesticides, polychlorinated biphenyls, and metals. This report presents results of a study of the contaminants entering the northern river ecosystem and of the effects of these contaminants on riparian wildlife, focusing on the common merganser. The researchers collected pre-fledged mergansers upstream and downstream from a pulp mill on the Wapiti River. They analyzed dioxins, furans, and chlorinated phenolics in pooled liver homogenates and analyzed organochlorine insecticides, polychlorinated biphenyls, and metals in individual liver or kidney tissue. The results presented include measurements of contaminants found in the mergansers and comparisons of measurements from upstream and downstream samples. AL CA EV LS ND SC

Cette étude de marché, réalisée auprès des acheteurs de poisson et fruits de mer du Québec, vise à répondre aux interrogations des promoteurs intéressés à réaliser la stabulation du crabe des neiges. Les principaux objectifs de cette étude sont : d'établir un portrait de la situation actuelle du marché pour le crabe des neiges, d'évaluer les perspectives de mise en marché du crabe des neiges en dehors de la saison de pêche, de situer cette nouvelle activité dans le contexte actuel de l'industrie de la pêche au crabe et enfin, de proposer une stratégie d'implantation pour cette nouvelle activité au Québec.

Cette étude a pour but de développer des pistes de réflexion concernant les résultats obtenus par les élèves franco-ontariens au test provincial de 9<sup>e</sup> année en lecture et écriture du Ministère de l'Éducation et de la Formation de l'Ontario et au Programme d'indicateurs du rendement scolaire du Conseil des ministres de l'éducation (Canada). La 1<sup>re</sup> partie consiste à situer l'utilisation des tests dans le contexte minoritaire franco-ontarien en tenant compte de facteurs tels que l'éducation en milieu minoritaire, la question des classes sociales, du capital culturel et du capital linguistique, l'hétérogénéité linguistique et les normes linguistiques. La 2<sup>e</sup> partie consiste en une analyse comparative du contenu des tests provinciaux de langue française et de langue anglaise préparés par le Ministère et des tests préparés par le Conseil des ministres de l'éducation. Illustre ce que cette analyse a permis d'examiner. Finalement, des entrevues semi-dirigées ont été menées auprès de 8 personnes qui faisaient partie de l'équipe de notation des tests provinciaux de lecture et d'écriture en 1993-94. L'étude se termine en décrivant des pistes de recherche possibles qui pourraient jeter un peu de lumière sur la question du rendement scolaire de la clientèle des écoles franco-ontariennes.

Le but de cette étude est de fournir suffisamment de renseignements et d'analyses pour permettre aux élus de prendre une décision éclairée quant à la création d'un service de police régional. L'étude décrit brièvement les services de police des municipalités de Newcastle et Chatham ainsi que du détachement de la G.R.C. à Newcastle. Les trois structures de commandement existantes dans la région nuisent à l'utilisation maximale et concertée de ressources policières limitées. On examine aussi les raisons favorisant un service de police régional avec un effectif accru et une structure de commandement unifié. Ainsi, un tel service pourrait être basé sur la fusion des services de police municipaux de Chatham et de Newcastle ainsi que l'addition de personnel supplémentaire pour assumer les responsabilités de la G.R.C. dans la région proposée.

Evaluation of an aerial spray strategy against the spruce budworm (Choristoneura fumiferana Clem.) using fenitrothion and B.t., (Bacillus thuringiensis) : final report

This report presents results from a series of trials to evaluate replicate test sites, two treated with fenitrothion followed by an application of Bacillus thuringiensis (B.t.) and two treated with two applications of B.t. A team of Cessna 188 aircraft equipped with Micronair AU4000 rotary atomizers applied all spray treatments; there were also unsprayed control plots for comparison. The investigators conducted biological evaluations of 60 selected balsam fir trees at each treatment site to record such information as number of buds and shoots, defoliation category for each bud/shoot, number of spruce budworms, and state of development of each bud/shoot. They also determined spray deposition. The report concludes with an assessment of the comparative efficacy of the treatments studied on spruce budworm mortality.

Both B.t. and fenitrothion insecticides are used in operational spray programs against the spruce budworm in New Brunswick. Previous research has revealed a considerable spread in the relative efficacy of the two insecticides, fenitrothion being apparently more efficacious. This is of concern, since B.t. applications are more expensive and there is a desire to move to increased use of B.t., which is considered to be more environmentally acceptable. This report presents results of a program conducted to document the range of predetermined key parameters that may influence spray efficiency of the two insecticides (with emphasis on B.t.): meteorological factors, spray deposition, and insect/host tree biology. The investigation involved aerial treatment of 17 spray sites (with 6 control sites for comparison) located to attempt to capture a range of potential spray timings and to ensure moderate to high budworm infestations. The appendices contain details on the program's weather forecasting and monitoring studies and analyses of insecticide deposition on foliage.

Balsam fir (Abies balsamea (L.) Mill.) trees are known to be susceptible to fungal attack after reaching maturity. This study compares the quality of sawn lumber products from mature and overmature balsam fir stands. The study investigated grade yields and bending properties of balsam fir lumber obtained from mature and overmature stands in New Brunswick. Grading was performed according to British specifications for structural visual and machine grades, and Canadian grading rules for appearance grades. The results presented in this report include yields for different grades according to lumber sectional dimensions and degree of maturity, and average specific gravity and bending properties for mature and overmature

In 1977, the New Brunswick Tree Improvement Council conducted tests of the wood density of six to ten year old jack pine using the Pilodyn wood tester. This report presents results of a study undertaken to re-evaluate the wood density of those trees at age 16 using a more precise method and to assess the potential of using a stress wave technique in assessing wood quality. The first phase of the study compared measurements from Pilodyn and stress wave methods against actual wood properties such as surface density and elasticity modulus. The second phase used x-ray densitometry to measure wood density and other wood quality traits such as ring width. In this phase, the investigators extracted core samples from selected trees and measured tree growth characteristics, using x-ray densitometric analysis to measure wood quality traits on the core samples. The results presented include correlations between wood density and growth traits as well as the effectiveness of the evaluation methods employed.

This publication is a guide for Ontario farm families in planning their farm businesses and estates for the orderly transfer of assets from one generation to the next. The guide begins with a review of key considerations in farm estate planning, including the ensuring of continuity of the farm business, successful retirement from farming, and fair treatment for all family members. The guide then explains issues related to family farming during the period when several generations are involved in running the farm. Further sections provide guidance on transferring the farm business by various methods such as sale and bequest, evaluate the role of insurance in farm estate planning, and explain provisions of tax laws affecting farm transfers, of wills, of power of attorney, and of Ontario family law. Appendices include sample farm business agreements.

Commercial manure spreading contractors spread a total of 6,185 oven-dry tonnes (15-20% solids) of sludge onto 13 areas of farmland, and the farmers then incorporated the sludge into the soil. The hauling and spreading were performed in two different periods: in May 1993, prior to planting, and in the August-September period following removal of the crop. This was done to assess the full-scale viability of the landspreading of sludge on farmland.

The Group's mandate was to review existing patterns of parental involvement in Toronto schools, and to develop goals, a plan and a monitoring mechanism for improving such involvement. The Group consulted with parents, schools and community groups; it also reviewed Board practices and identified Board personnel concerned with parental and community involvement in educational decision-making. The report concludes that each school must develop a plan for parental involvement suited to its own community, and the at home-school contacts must be increased, especially where barriers of time, language or culture exist. The Board should continue to support home-schools associations, educational councils, workshops and parent conferences. More in-service training for teachers on the topic of parent involvement is suggested. The report welcomes the establishment of a Parent Involvement Sub-committee of the Board. Includes the policy statement submitted to the Board by the Group, and recommendations

In the following categories: Board of Education policies, procedures and practices relating to parental involvement; the key questions: what we heard; parental involvement in the secondary school; and area/ward and city-wide parent structures.

This report on the financial position of Ontario universities continues and extends a pattern of analysis which has been developed by the Council of Ontario Universities. It reviews trends over time and makes comparisons among different sectors in Ontario and with other jurisdictions within Canada and the United States, and helps to put in perspective the adequacy of funding levels available to universities in this province. The graphical and tabular statistical data commences with the 1977-78 university fiscal year and ends with the most recent data available.

This paper formulates the bilevel programming problem in the general case and then reformulates it in terms of the value function associated with the second level. The paper then reviews the existence theory developed by Yezza (1993) and develops necessary conditions of optimality in which three cases are distinguished: the Lipschitz case, the differentiable case, and the convex case, with examples provided for each case. The value function technique used is related to standard methods of nonsmooth analysis and the behavior of the function is studied. The final section of the paper formulates the general multilevel programming problem and gives the necessary conditions of optimality in the general case, illustrating the application of these conditions by an example.

These guidelines are intended to eliminate or reduce the effect of irrigation developments on fish and fish habitat in Saskatchewan. The guidelines first outline the legislation and policy relating to provincial management of fish habitat, then provide background information on irrigation systems used in Saskatchewan. The guidelines also discuss the impacts of irrigation developments on fish and fish habitat, including flooding of riverine habitat, changes in flow regimes, water level fluctuations, erosion and sedimentation, and pollution from agricultural chemicals. Topics covered in the section on protection of fish habitat include the choice of irrigation method, scheduling of construction activities, site selection and planning, instream structures, water intake design, erosion control, operation and maintenance of constructed systems, and control of deleterious substances. A glossary is included.

The National Forest Genetic Resources Centre held a workshop to address issues relevant to the conservation and management of Canada's forest genetic resources. The workshop included presentations highlighting the current status of conservation efforts and ideas and strategies for optimal in-situ and ex-situ conservation of forest genetic resources. Working group discussions were a major component of the workshop and were aimed at identifying gaps in current conservation efforts, conservation priorities, research initiatives to support conservation priorities, and promoting opportunities for increased collaborative efforts. A major output of the workshop was the development of a framework for a national strategy to focus on the sound management of Canada's forest genetic resources. This report presents the workshop proceedings, including the contributed papers on forest genetic conservation.

FuzzyCLIPS is an extended version of the CLIPS rule-based shell developed by NASA's Artificial Intelligence Section for representing and manipulating fuzzy facts and rules. In addition to the CLIPS functionality, FuzzyCLIPS can deal with exact, fuzzy (or inexact), and combined reasoning, allowing fuzzy and normal terms to be freely mixed in the rules and facts of an expert system. The system uses two basic inexact concepts, fuzziness and uncertainty. This document presents installation information for FuzzyCLIPS, describes the changes made to CLIPS to implement fuzzy expert systems, gives some background on fuzzy logic, sets out the use of the FuzzyCLIPS extensions (with examples), describes further extensions made to CLIPS to accommodate needs of continuously operating systems, and outlines the limitations of FuzzyCLIPS. The appendix provides an example of using FuzzyCLIPS in a temperature control problem. Includes subject index.

This paper examines the macroeconomic implications of rising government debt in Canada and the short-run costs and long-run benefits of stemming the rise. The discussion begins with an evaluation of the long-run consequences of increasing government indebtedness, first based on the simple arithmetic of the government's long-run budget constraint and then based on simulations of the Bank of Canada's main model of the Canadian economy, which incorporates several channels through which government debt may affect real economic activity. The dynamic effects of debt and deficit reduction are analyzed for situations involving a state of excess demand and a state of excess supply.

The goal of the study was to determine whether benthic algal biomass in the upper Athabasca River is limited by the availability of phosphorus or nitrogen. The results include the taxonomic, growth, and biomass responses by periphytic algae to phosphate additions of up to 50 micrograms per liter. The report also develops a model describing change in relative peak biomass with phosphorus addition, using data from the Athabasca experiments. Comparisons are made with a similarly derived model using results from experiments on the South Thompson River.

Guidelines for the development of protocols : community-based responses to the abuse and neglect of older people

Regina : Saskatchewan Social Services, 1995. 42 p. : ill., Bibl. MICROLOG 95-06851 (1 fiche)

This document provides some resources and guidelines that communities may find useful as they begin the process of developing a community-based response to the abuse and neglect of older people. The first section contains background information that includes definitions of abuse, statistics on the nature and frequency of abuse, discussion of legal issues, principles to consider in developing a response to the abuse of older people, and information regarding risk factors. A work plan provides guidelines communities may find useful in beginning the process of community cooperation, including more specific information to guide the development of community protocols, their information, and evaluation.

Haley Lake Ecological Reserve was created to protect the Vancouver Island marmot (Marmota Vancouverensis), an endangered species found only in small areas of the island, and its habitat. This report presents a background summary of efforts to protect the marmot and the management objectives and actions being taken to create a viable ecological reserve for the marmot. It also outlines ongoing management actions and priority actions to be taken in the future. The appendices include a detailed description of the features and resources of the ecological reserve, land tenure and occupancy rights issues associated with the reserve and adjacent lands, uses of the reserve for research and education, and the characteristics of the marmot.

The Hayward Brook project has developed into an integrated interdisciplinary study of both biotic and abiotic resources. The objective is to measure the responses of specific components of both the terrestrial and aquatic ecosystems to forested stream buffers following harvest of timber on the adjacent landscape. Pretreatment inventories of breeding birds, small mammals, aquatic invertebrates, winter birds and mammals, vegetation communities and water quality and flow are near completion. Pretreatment data will be summarized and represent benchmarks with which posttreatment measurements will be compared. Two undisturbed sites will provide controls. This report describes the study area and project design. Appendices provide reports on specific projects undertaken during the year including results.

Regional Health Authorities have been in place in Alberta since 1994, and selecting the best people to serve on those bodies is an important decision. This discussion paper first provides some basic information on Regional Health Authorities, how members of those bodies are currently selected, and how those bodies involve their community members. The paper then puts forth the challenges involved in selecting Regional Health Authority members, including accountability, personnel selection, costs, and the ensuring of continuity. Finally, the paper presents three alternatives for selecting those members: election, appointment, and a combination of election and appointment. Each alternative is accompanied by specific questions to be considered by the public. The paper includes a

A particular area of concern related to municipal and industrial effluent discharges into northern rivers is the effect of nutrients (nitrogen and phosphorus) on the aquatic environment. This study investigated spatial patterns in nutrient limitation in the Athabasca River using nutrient-diffusing substrata. The researchers performed laboratory and field experiments to develop an innovative nutrient diffusing bioassay design suitable for use in the river, and to quantify nutrient release rates from the substrata. They conducted related field experiments to determine spatial patterns in nutrient limitation and identify the effects of nutrient additions on epilithic and macroinvertebrate communities upstream and downstream of municipal and pulp mill discharge sites. This report presents the results of the study, including the responses of biota to nutrient enrichment according to the site location and time of year.

This report reviews and analyses Saint John River flooding at Perth-Andover, perceived causes of flooding, and available flood protection measures. It presents results of a community workshop and a survey of the business community regarding the impact of flooding and the suitability of flood protection measures. The report evaluates such flood control options as passive approaches, physical adaptation, and flood prevention, and provides results of a cost benefit analysis of those options. Finally, the report makes recommendations with respect to a preferred option, municipal regulations regarding future development, and further research.

The review summarizes the effects of various forestry practices such as clearcutting on water temperature, sediment loading, water chemistry, oxygen depletion, microbial pathogens, and hydrocarbon pollution. It then reviews the functions and requirements of buffer zones, including stream bank stabilization, moderation of water temperature, control of sediment flow, and prevention of changes in water chemistry. The review ends with an overview of buffer zone management, with practices in Oregon used to illustrate best management practice, and a set of recommendations

This paper analyzes multi-period regulation or procurement policies under asymmetric information between the regulator and regulated firms. The paper provides a graphic analysis of the second-best policy in terms of the regulator's commitment capacity, and distinguishes between full commitment (long-term contracts that can be committed to), commitment and renegotiation (renegotiation-proof long-term contracts), and noncommitment (a series of short-term contracts). The graphical analysis of the two-period, two-type environment emphasizes the rationale of the main results concerning the form of the optimal incentive scheme. The analysis can be applied to situations where the production of a public good or service, such as the level of safety in the transport of hazardous materials, is delegated to private firms.

Intends to provide an assessment of current policy and practice in Ontario universities with respect to the emphasis placed on learning and teaching effectiveness and to advance proposals that might help to increase the emphasis on high quality learning and teaching in Ontario universities and involve faculty in instructional development. Consulted publications on teaching and learning in higher education and on instructional development strategies. Examined the union contracts and official university policy statements such as mission statements, tenure and promotion guidelines, and strategic planning documents of 15 Ontario universities. Undertook a survey of colleagues in instructional development throughout Ontario and consulted with several international colleagues. Concludes that the centrality of teaching in the university's core mission is not reflected in current practice, largely because of a reward structure that accords very low value to teaching activities. Asserts that innovative programs and practices which already exist might serve as models for future initiatives to change the current state of teaching. Lists recommendations.

The potential for accidental release of large quantities of crude oil into the nearshore marine environment off the British Columbia coast prompted an examination of the potential consequences of such events to local ecosystems. This report presents results of a study to assess the long-term influence on pink salmon fry following short-term exposure to sublethal doses of crude oil water-soluble fraction. The investigators chose pink salmon fry because of their economic status, the known sensitivity of this species to oil, and their importance in nearshore food webs. The study examined the effect of oil exposure on long-term ocean survival to harvest and escapement of pink salmon fry. In addition, the study measured the influence of oil exposure on growth, hydrocarbon avoidance, and liver, kidney, and gill cellular morphology during the exposure period.

Most urban dwellers in developing countries live outside of the regulatory frameworks created and imposed by governments. A category of informally housed people that are particularly vulnerable and inadequately provided for in terms of physical and social infrastructure are those living in so-called informal settlements. This paper presents a broad overview of some of the international literature in English that attempts to improve the understanding of the nature of informal settlements, both as entities in themselves and in relation to the broader urban context within which they exist. Dominant themes discussed in the view include the concept of community, marginalization, the roles of the state and the private sector, means of securing access to land and shelter, and social empowerment. The report also examines strategies to improve upgrading interventions and build institutional capacity in informal settlements.

This paper summarizes results of a study intended to assess and compare the cost effectiveness of two patterns of community development: a conventional suburban development pattern and a mixed-use, more compact development planned according to the principles of New Urbanism. The analysis considers the long-term, life-cycle costs of various linear infrastructure and community services, and differentiates between public and private (i.e. developer) costs. The summary discusses the study methodology, describes the test site selected and the New Urbanism plan organized around a series of individual, identifiable neighborhoods, and presents a statistical comparison of that plan with a conventional plan. Finally, the summary explains the costing methodology and compares the costs of the two plans.

L'Institut canadien des produits pétroliers (ICPP) est une association à but non lucratif, créée pour représenter les compagnies canadiennes engagées dans le raffinage et la commercialisation des produits pétroliers. Les compagnies membres de l'Institut se spécialisent dans le raffinage, le transport et la commercialisation des produits pétroliers. L'industrie approvisionne les consommateurs et les industries en produits pétroliers, de l'essence à moteur au carburant diesel en passant par l'asphalte. L'Institut mène des travaux de recherche en vue d'élaborer des politiques dans une foule de domaines reliés à l'environnement, à la santé, à la sécurité et aux pratiques commerciales. Ce rapport se penche sur les activités de l'industrie, la situation économique et rendement financier, la protection environnementale et sécurité, et les prix.

More than 5,000 products used every day by Canadians come from the forest. Private woodlots yield sawlogs, fuelwood, pulpwood, and other commercial products. Major benefits in terms of recreation opportunities, clean water, soil conservation, and a host of other environmental values are also provided by these woodlots. This booklet presents a way for woodlot owners to direct activity on their forested land so as to enjoy a number of benefits at the same time.

Systemic networks and description spaces both address a problem central to linguistic and to general knowledge representation, namely that of describing entities for the purposes of definition, taxonomic classification, and inference. This paper examines the comparability of both these formalisms and provides algorithms for translating between them. The paper then extends the description space formalism so that it remains intuitively appealing while acquiring the compactness and explicitness advantages of systemic networks. The paper provides a polynomial time algorithm to translate any systemic network to an extended description space. The translation algorithms developed in the paper establish a link between computational linguistics systems based on systemic grammars and expert knowledge systems based on description spaces.

The purpose of this study is to identify opportunities whereby private woodlot management and marketing can be more closely integrated to improve the level of woodlot management in New Brunswick. The study methodology included a literature review and interviews with stakeholders in woodlot management. This report reviews past and current approaches to private woodlot management and forest product marketing, describes strengths and weaknesses of the current system in New Brunswick, and identifies problems and opportunities with regard to marketing and management on private woodlots. The report concludes with recommendations on private woodlot legislation, taxation, marketing boards, government programs, funding mechanisms, and the role of stakeholders. Appendices include summaries of New Brunswick marketing board delivery ticket policies and annual summaries of the boards' production reports.

Ce rapport fait le point sur le séjour de neuf mois qu'a effectué l'auteur au Laboratoire LIFIA de Grenoble en France dans le cadre d'un programme de coopération scientifique entre le Conseil national de recherches du Canada et le Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique français. Le cadre du programme de coopération est tout d'abord décrit, suivi d'une présentation du Laboratoire d'accueil. On présente ensuite le projet de recherche qui a servi à la coopération. Celui-ci concernait l'aide informatisée au pilotage d'atelier de production. Une réflexion sur une approche originale du problème par la reconnaissance de situation a également pu être effectuée. On discute ensuite les apports de ce stage pour le projet des Systèmes d'Informations Techniques et pour le Laboratoire des systèmes intelligents de la Division. On termine par la présentation des contacts et échanges effectués avec d'autres institutions françaises et par quelques commentaires sur le stage et le programme de coopération en insistant sur la complémentarité des deux laboratoires.

Damages claimed in a legal action are traditionally quantified at trial and become due and owing when judgment is given. Delays in the court system can delay payment of damages, even when the defendant admits liability, and can have serious negative effects on plaintiffs. In Manitoba, there is no provision by which a plaintiff can receive a partial payment of damages prior to trial. This report examines the advisability of allowing the Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench to grant interim payment orders in civil proceedings. The report also examines the case for law reform in this area, as well as the circumstances in which an interim payment should be allowed, how an interim payment power should be implemented, the factors determining the amount of award, issues involving cases with multiple defendants, and adjustments of final damage awards. The report concludes with draft amendments to legislation that implement recommendations for reform.

Examines 13 recent educational psychology textbooks for their exposition of 2 issues in the intelligence quotient controversy: the heritability of IQ and cultural bias in IQ tests. Compares these accounts to the expert-opinion survey on both topics as reported in Snyderman and Rothman's (1988) book, The IQ Controversy, the Media, and Public Policy. Explores sociological and political factors which influence textbook content. Notes evidence that some educational policy textbook authors misunderstand the meaning and/or significance of terms such as heritability, and cultural bias, that the positions of major researchers, such as Arthur Jensen, are misrepresented, and that experts hold more of a consensus on the issues than do the authors of the educational psychology texts in this sample. The analysis suggests that course instructors and students should be alert for evidence of bias in textbooks, and by implication, in themselves.

Kudoa is a protozoan parasite that infects the muscle of many marine fishes, including salmon. Heavy infections have been linked to soft texture in commercial species, leading to lower market value. This report presents the proceedings of a workshop held to bring together scientists and salmon farmers to learn about Kudoa and to develop a coordinated approach to finding solutions. The first day of the workshop considered the science and technology of Kudoa issues and the second day was devoted to salmon farming experiences. Topics of individual presentations included interactions between Kudoa and Pacific whiting, detection of fish tissue parasites, Kudoa in farmed Atlantic salmon, epidemiology of the soft-texture syndrome, mitigation of Kudoa, and the pathology of Kudoa infection.

The L-2.0 program is designed to deal with the specification of the functional form in the generalized single-equation regression model where the functional form of heteroskedasticity of the residuals, which may also be autocorrelated using an R-Koyck process for each autoregressive order considered, can be estimated. This process is the analog of the usual Koyck transformation on a time series, but extended to a matrix R which is called a contiguity matrix in the context of spatial econometrics and which can be constructed according to any set of rules defined or directed by the analyst. For each order of correlation, the R-Koyck process only adds to the usual autoregressive parameter a proximity parameter which measures the relative weight of close and remote neighbors in an infinite distributed lag structure. A maximum likelihood procedure is used to estimate jointly all the parameters.

This report describes a FED pilot project established as a cooperative federal-provincial-private sector venture at Malcolm Brook in northern New Brunswick. The report presents a landscape analysis of the project area, consisting of an examination of the area's landscape ecology, landscape character, and the development opportunities and constraints on each type of resource in the area (landscape, recreation, timber and roads, wildlife/fish, plants, water, soils and landforms). The report then develops a design concept for the area, based on general stand types combined with special designated areas from the working forest. The report ends with an implementation plan and recommendations for improvements.

Realtime programs that will be installed at many sites have characteristics that cause installation, maintenance, and evolution to be labour-intensive if approached with conventional tools and techniques intended for single-installation programs. This report describes representative difficulties of this kind, illustrated by examples, as well as tools and techniques which are available to address those difficulties. The report focuses on the viewpoint of the program installer rather than the programmer. Issues addressed in the report include the lack of knowledge of the program by the installer, lack of access to proprietary codes, the need to accommodate long system lifetimes in which the hardware may change, the use of different peripherals, and the documentation of multi-installation programs. The report ends with a description of Harmony technology, a solution for multi-installation support.

By Hiromitsu Yamada, Pierre Boulanger and Katsuhiko Sakaue. Ottawa : National Research Council Canada, Division of Electrical Engineering, 1989. v, 13 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-06951 (1 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

This report describes a preliminary study of the potential use of dynamic programming techniques to perform the matching of three dimensional images. The matching technique uses the segmentation produced by the differential geometry method. Using the signs of the Gaussian and mean curvatures, one can segment a range image into regions corresponding to one of the eight fundamental surfaces such as peak, pit, ridge, flat, valley, saddle ridge, minimal surface, and saddle valley. This segmentation produces a labeled image called a topographic primal sketch. The result of this segmentation is an adjacency graph of regions of similar curvature signs. The report shows how the graphs produced by this segmentation technique can be matched to a model graph using dynamic programming. The report also presents the mathematical formulation of the matching process.

Microcogeneration assessment guide for federally-owned buildings

By Edward Morofsky. Ottawa : Public Works Canada, 1993. iv, 118 p. : ill.
MICROLOG 95-07465 (2 fiche)

The purpose of this study is to develop guidelines for assessing the feasibility of microcogeneration (cogeneration when the electrical output is less than one megawatt) for buildings, and to apply these guidelines on a sample of 20 buildings. The first part of the study introduces cogeneration technology and addresses all issues concerning the suitability of cogeneration, including load levelling, energy balance, thermal and electrical loads, air pollution, noise, and architectural considerations. Only reciprocating engine systems are considered, as these are more economical in small-scale operations. The second part presents a detailed assessment methodology, including determination of technical viability, size, and economic viability. The assessment considers both standalone cogeneration and the use of absorption chilling as a load levelling technique. The third part describes the building assessments, with supporting data for each cogeneration application.

The report gives detailed consideration to the approaches for minimizing wind damage in released white spruce understory specific to the two-stage harvesting and silvicultural system. The review addresses the individual tree stability, stand stability, and external stability factors such as site characteristics, topography, windiness of the region, and sheltering effects of adjacent stands, and relates these to a framework for recognizing high-risk sites and stands. The report also discusses principles of wind damage management in the context of designing silvicultural systems with incremental wind protection levels.

The brassicas include an important group of oilseed crops such as canola and commercial vegetables such as cabbage and broccoli. Infection by species of the fungus Alternaria causes severe yield losses to those crops. This document compiles the most recent information on fundamental and applied knowledge of Alternaria species infecting Brassicaceae crops and weeds. It includes a review of the symptoms, geographical distribution, yield losses, and disease assessment methods of infections from the four most widely distributed species of Alternaria; information on the characteristics of the pathogen, its host range, disease cycle, process of infection, epidemiology, fine structures and electron microscopy, resistance, and phytotoxins; and techniques for disease infection and management. The document concludes with an evaluation of future strategies and priorities in the management of Alternaria diseases.

In the MASS (Montane Alternative Silvicultural Systems) study at a Vancouver Island site, an old-growth forest is being harvested using a combination of clearcutting, green-tree retention, strip-cutting, and patch-cutting. This report describes a study conducted to evaluate the pre-harvest richness, diversity, and relative abundance of breeding forest birds in the MASS study area, and to obtain baseline information on predation rates. The bird survey involved establishment of 64 bird sampling stations in four transects, each of which was surveyed four times in May-June 1992. Predation was studied by placing fresh Japanese quail eggs in 120 artificial nests and monitoring the nests over time. Results discussed include the number of species detected, patterns of rarity and abundance, predation rates, and the influence of the forest edge on bird diversity and abundance.

Mortality among employees at Courtaulds Fibres Canada, Cornwall, Ontario

By Gary M. Liss and Murray M. Finkelstein.
Toronto : Ministry of Labour, Health & Safety Studies Unit, 1994. 20 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-07124 (1 fiche)

The Courtaulds Fibres plant in Cornwall, Ontario produced viscose rayon from raw materials including carbon disulfide, a substance previously shown to be associated with increased risk for heart attacks. The Ontario Ministry of Labour investigated possible chronic health effects, including heart attacks and neurological conditions, among workers at the plant by examining work history records for 279 deceased workers at the plant. For comparison, the ministry obtained records for 511 deaths from the pulp and paper plant in Cornwall. The mortality pattern at each plant was compared to that in the Ontario population and case-control studies were used to compare the two working groups directly. This report presents the results of that study, including comparisons of mortality from circulatory diseases among a subgroup of Courtaulds workers who had been employed in areas of high exposure to carbon disulfide.

This report presents results from a study of the effectiveness of mounding site preparation for establishing jack pine and black spruce in boreal Ontario. Site preparation provided five kinds of micro-site for planting: untreated, Bracke patch shoulder, Bracke patch bottom, mound of mineral soil on the Bracke patch shoulder, and mound of mineral soil on the minimound of material scuffed out of the Bracke patch. On each site, four 30-tree plots per microsite were planted. Root growth capacity was determined on subsamples of planting stock and performance in a nursery test planting was determined in other subsamples. The results from the first five years of the study include height, relative height and volume growth rates, stem diameter and volume, and two performance indices that combined survival and growth.

Multiply sectioned Bayesian networks for neuromuscular diagnosis

This paper presents results of research in developing the PAINULIM expert system for neuromuscular diagnosis involving a painful or impaired upper limb. Development of PAINULIM is based on Bayesian belief networks and use of three major information sources: clinical examination, electromyographic studies, and nerve conduction studies. As a general solution to such problems as large computational overhead characteristic of large application domains, the desire to provide an interface that allows a focused display of a subdomain of the user's current interest, and the need to consider domain structure, the PAINULIM researchers have developed the multiply sectioned Bayesian network. The paper also discusses the issue of representing anatomical distribution of multiple diseases by exploring 'explaining away' and includes an evaluation of the performance of PAINULIM in 76 patient cases.

In response to concerns over the health of the Niagara River ecosystem, a remedial action plan is being developed through a three stage process. The 1993 report from the first stage described the current environmental conditions in the river system, identified sources of contamination, and outlined the beneficial uses of the system which are impaired and the extent of the impairments. Reviews of this report identified missing information and knowledge gaps. This update report contains information identified as missing from the 1993 report, new information from recent studies, and information previously considered outside the scope of the 1993 report. It includes an outline of new developments which may affect the ecosystem, an assessment of pollution sources and water quality, descriptions of contaminated sediment sites, and assessments of contaminants in wildlife. The Niagara River has been designated as one of 43 Areas of Concern in the Great Lakes Basin due to degraded water quality. In response to concerns regarding the health of the Niagara River ecosystem, this Remedial Action Plan (RAP) is being developed through a dynamic three stage process. The RAP is applicable only to the Canadian side of the river. This Stage 2 report identifies the goals and objectives developed by the RAP participants, including preservation and restoration of sustainable habitat, improvement of water quality, and correction of contaminated sediment sites. The report also sets out recommended remedial activities necessary to restore the desired beneficial uses of the river system and to achieve the environmental goals. In addition, the report outlines both the monitoring program needed to track the effectiveness of those activities and a RAP implementation structure.

This document provides an accounting of the factors considered and the rationale employed in determining the volume of timber allowed to be harvested annually from the Area. The document sets out the guiding principles for the determination and then considers such factors as base-case timber supply forecasts, inventory information, the land base contributing to the timber harvest, regeneration, commercial thinning, alternative silvicultural systems, waste and breakage, harvest sequencing and flow, integrated forest management objectives, and community dependence on the forest industry. The document ends with the reasons for decision regarding the annual allowable cut. The appendix includes a summary of public input to the Area's timber supply review.

This paper describes the general role and operations of these offices and commissions, and reviews how the individuals in charge of each body are appointed, their term of office, and their specific duties. Since these offices and commissions are considered to be neither part of the government nor of the private sector, questions have arisen about the nature of their relationship with the Legislature and the applicability of certain laws to their operations. The paper concludes with a discussion of such questions, including the application of provincial and municipal laws to the legislative building, accountability, and terms of office.

An O(m + n log n) algorithm for the maximum clique problem in circular-arc graphs -- Rev.

MICROLOG 95-07249 (1 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

This paper presents an algorithm to compute, in  $O(m + \log m)$  time, a maximum clique in circular-arc graphs with  $n$  vertices and  $m$  edges, provided that a circular-arc model of the graph is given. If the circular-arc endpoints are given in sorted order, the time complexity is  $O(m)$ . The algorithm takes advantage of the geometric structure of the circular-arc model by radially sweeping the circular-arc endpoints, and makes use of a very simple data structure consisting of doubly-linked lists. The use of the radial sweep technique eliminates the need for solving each of the subproblems independently, leading to a decrease in computational time compared to the best previous time bound for the problem under study. For vertex-weighted circular-arc graphs, it is possible to use this approach to obtain an algorithm for finding a maximum-weight clique that matches the best-known algorithm. The resulting algorithm does not require looking at every edge of the graph.

The Operational, human resource and financial implications of the privatized highway maintenance program of the Province of British Columbia : a preliminary report

Submitted by: Peter Burton...et al. Victoria : Ministry of Transportation & Highways, 1994. 218 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-07007 (3 fiche)

The original highway maintenance program of the British Columbia Ministry of Transportation and Highways was provincially operated. In 1987/88, the province replaced this program by contracting with private companies for the provision of highway, road, and bridge maintenance services. This report presents the results of a review of the privatized highway maintenance program, and evaluates the operational impact of privatization, the human resource implications of privatization, and the financial and economic impacts. Specific issues considered in the review include the adequacy of privatized maintenance, employment policies, constraints built into privatized maintenance contracts, costs in comparison to the original program, the Ministry's ability to control costs, and the issue of public accountability. The report concludes with recommendations on the need for public review and on options for highway maintenance service delivery.

Optimal control problems governed by integral equations with state constraints

MICROLOG 95-07406 (1 fiche)

This paper proves a maximum principle of Pontryagin's type for optimal control problems governed by integral equations. The proof technique uses the penalty method of Berkovitz (1976). Since the data of the problem are not all differentiable, the paper employs Clarke's (1990) generalized gradient for functions as a replacement for derivatives and Clarke's normal cone for sets. The novel aspect of the paper is the combination of nonsmooth analysis with the Berkovitz penalty method, which has hitherto been applied only to smooth problems.

Optimal coterie for rings and related networks

Burnaby, BC : Laboratory for Computer & Communications Research ; Simon Fraser University, Centre for Systems Science, 1991. 18 p. : ill., Bibl. (Technical report / Simon Fraser University. MICROLOG 95-07471 (1 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

For a graph  $G=(V,E)$  representing a distributed system, a coterie is a family  $C$  of subsets of  $V$  such that any pair of subsets in  $C$  has at least one node in common and no subset in  $C$  contains any other subset in  $C$ . Assuming that each node  $v$  has operating probability  $p$ , the availability of a coterie is defined as the probability that the operating nodes and edges of  $G$  connect all nodes in at least one subset in the coterie. Although it is computationally very difficult to find an optimal coterie that maximizes availability for general  $G$ , this paper shows which coterie is optimal if  $G$  is a ring. In such a case, an optimal coterie can be computed in polynomial time. This result can be extended to the more general graphs, in which each biconnected component is either an edge or a ring.

Pattern matching with abstract data types

By F. Warren Burton and Robert D. Cameron. Burnaby, BC : Simon Fraser University, Centre for Systems Science ; Laboratory for Computer & Communications Research, 1991. 19 p. : Bibl. (Technical report / Simon Fraser University. Centre for Systems Science and Laboratory for Computer & Communications Research (B.C.) ; CSS/LCCR TR91-05)
MICROLOG 95-07470 (1 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

Two proposals have been made to generalize pattern matching to a broader class of data types: the laws mechanism of Miranda, which allows pattern matching with non-free algebraic types, and the views concept of Wadler (1987), which enables defining of arbitrary mappings between a physical implementation and a view supporting pattern matching. This paper proposes a third approach which unifies the laws and views mechanisms while avoiding their problems. The paper views pattern matching philosophically as a bundling of case recognition and component selection functions instead of a method for inverting data construction. This can be achieved by removing the implied equivalence between data constructors and pattern constructors. In practice, the proposal allows automatic mapping into a view but not out of a view. Equational reasoning can still be used with the resulting system.

Piecewise linear least-squares approximation of planar curves including computer programs

By N.N. Abdelmalek. Ottawa : National Research Council Canada, Division of Electrical Engineering, 1989. v, 49 p. : Bibl. MICROLOG 95-06944 (1 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

This paper presents two algorithms for solving the piecewise linear least-squares approximation problem of plane curves. The first algorithm is for the case when the residual (error) norm in any segment is not to exceed a pre-assigned value. The second is for the case when the number of segments is given and a balanced residual norm solution is required. The given curve is first digitized and either algorithm is then applied to the discrete points. For each segment, the upper triangular matrix in the factorization of the augmented coefficient matrix of the resulting system of linear equations is obtained. The paper calculates the least-squares solutions in terms of the matrices; the algorithms then work in an iterative manner by updating the least-squares solutions for the segments via updating the matrices. The calculation requires little computational effort, and the paper includes numerical results and computer program listings for the two algorithms written in FORTRAN 77.

Une Place à part : l'indépendance et la responsabilité de la magistrature au Canada

L'indépendance de la magistrature revêt une importance particulière en régime fédéral. Le Canada est un État fédéral doté d'un partage constitutionnel des compétences entre le gouvernement fédéral et les gouvernements provinciaux. Comme dans d'autres États fédéraux, il est nécessaire d'avoir un arbitre impartial pour régler les litiges aussi bien entre les deux paliers de gouvernement qu'entre les gouvernements et les citoyens qui invoquent le partage des compétences. Ce document se penche précisément sur cette question. Les points qui y sont examinés sont les suivants : la protection des juges; l'immovibilité; la sécurité financière; la discipline; les codes de déontologie; l'évaluation du rendement; la formation des juges; l'administration des tribunaux; les juges en chef et leur cour; et les nominations et promotions.

This report suggests a number of ways in which the judiciary and those responsible for appointing members of judiciary can develop techniques of accountability that are consistent with judicial independence. The report begins with a brief history of judicial independence, including Charter of Rights and constitutional issues. Further chapters explore various aspects of judicial independence: protection of the judiciary from physical, political, and psychological harm; security of tenure; and financial security. The report then examines the disciplining of judges, codes of conduct, and performance evaluation of judges. Subsequent chapters cover judicial education, the administration of the court system, Chief Justices and their courts, and provincial and federal appointments or elevations in the judicial system. Comparisons are included throughout of Canadian practice with those in other jurisdictions, notably the United States and England.

Le premier but du projet était de prendre connaissance et de faire l'analyse des politiques existantes en matière d'éducation multiculturelle/interculturelle tant au niveau provincial, qu'au niveau des conseils, commissions ou divisions scolaires ayant des écoles de langue française. Le second but était de produire un guide d'utilisation à l'intention des conseils scolaires désireux d'élaborer leur propre politique un cette matière.

In all major pork-producing countries, there are indications that pork quality appears to have declined. Major problems are the apparent increased frequency of pale, soft exudative pork (PSE) and dark, firm and dry (DFD) pork. This report begins with an examination of methods for identifying PSE/DFD pork, then considers the processing problems arising when pork from different quality groups is processed. Yield figures presented can be used to estimate the financial implications of processing PSE and DFD pork. The report also reviews the retail case life of PSE/DFD pork and its palatability. The rest of the report reviews the current knowledge of the main factors responsible for causing increased frequency of poor quality pork. Subjects covered include the genetics of stress susceptibility, detecting and testing for stress susceptibility, and the ante-mortem and post-mortem influences on pork quality.

This study is the first documentation of the life cycle of the gypsy moth and its natural control factors in New Brunswick. The study methods included egg mass collections, field collections, and subsequent rearing. The investigations found three species of larval parasite, indicating options for future applied biological control. Testing of applied biological and chemical insecticides was done using bioassays of laboratory-reared larvae due to the difficulty of finding sufficient numbers of larvae in the field. Ground application trials included use of the chemical insecticide permethrin and the biological insecticide B.t. An operational spruce budworm spraying project gave the opportunity to bioassay foliage from an area aerially treated with another B.t. product and another area treated with the chemical insecticide fenitrothion. This report presents the study results, including extent of moth larval mortality under the treatments used.

Prescribed Burning Workshop

Prescribed Burning Workshop (1993 : Chalk River, Ont.). Chalk River, ON : Ministry of Natural Resources, Aviation, Flood & Fire Management Branch ; Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. : VMAP, 1993. 25 p. MICROLOG 95-07034 (1 fiche)

In many areas of Ontario, partial cutting and clear-cut systems have not resulted in adequate natural or artificial regeneration of trees without management of competing vegetation. New policy directions and cost considerations are prompting resource managers to consider greater use of prescribed fire technology as an alternative to mechanical or chemical methods for the management of pine and tolerant hardwood groups. This document summarizes presentations at a workshop held to provide a forum for exchanging knowledge and experience on the operational, administrative, and biological aspects of applying prescribed fire in central Ontario. Topics presented include fire ecology concepts, impact of fire on wildlife, the use of fire in management of birch, oak, and pine, cost estimation, and fire management.

The review also evaluates the planning and administrative framework within which prescribed fire operations are conducted. The review gathered information through meetings with fire management specialists, foresters, ecologists, and biologists in Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources district offices. Sections of the review cover the history of prescribed burning in the province, the purposes of the procedure and its general ecological basis, the use of prescribed fire with individual tree species, the effects of fire on the environment, the physical nature of prescribed fire, the operational setting of prescribed burning, and the areas of the study region with potential for prescribed fire.

Prevalence and incidence of illicit drug use in British Columbia : an update

British Columbia. Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit. Drug Strategies Section. Victoria : The Section, 1994. ix, 135 p. : ill., Bibl. MICROLOG 95-07095 (2 fiche)

The purpose of this report is to examine information regarding the prevalence and incidence of illicit drug use in British Columbia, with an emphasis on information available from 1990 and a special focus on heroin. Prevalence refers to the number of people who have used a drug at some time during their lives, and incidence refers to the number of first-time users of a drug during a specified period. The report draws on several types of information in combination to provide a more complete estimate of the prevalence of illicit drugs; this information includes results from self-report surveys, statistics from detox facilities and hospitals, drug seizures, offenses, convictions, and information obtained from agencies providing services to illicit drug users. The report includes a comparison of illicit drug use around the world and a discussion of trends in illicit drug use.

Il s'agissait de faire le point sur la prévention de la violence à l'école telle qu'elle se présente actuellement au Canada et de mettre en évidence certaines questions critiques, afin d'aider à combattre ce problème social. L'étude consiste en une analyse descriptive des documents de politiques et des programmes que les conseils scolaires du Canada ont élaborés pour lutter contre la violence à l'école. This paper develops a primal path following algorithmic scheme for the monotone variational inequality problem with one simple constraint and nonnegativity variables. The paper then discusses some implementation issues such as convergence criteria and presents computational results to show how the method works with various parameters defined in the algorithmic scheme and how it converges with different data parameters. The results demonstrate the robustness of the developed algorithm in terms of its convergence behavior.

Formal linguistic theories of syntax in natural language have been widely influenced by government and binding (GB) theory and its development. There have been various proposals to implement versions of GB theory computationally by translating a GB grammar into a program in some programming language. This paper proposes an alternative approach, translating a GB grammar into a static discontinuity grammar (SDG). SDG is a logic grammar formalism that is well adapted to handle the kinds of rules, principles, and constraints found in the GB/Barriers family of grammatical theories. The paper introduces a single level of representation in which all constraints are applied. The SDG formalism possesses grammar rules that allow relations between widely separated constituents to be stated in a single grammar rule. The resulting SDG can be processed by a parser to recover the thematic information and constituency structure associated with a natural language sentence.

The Canadian Environmental Assessment Act obliges federal authorities to establish a public registry for the purpose of facilitating public access to the records relating to environmental assessments, and to operate the registry in a manner which ensures convenient public access. This document is the master index of the basic information required to identify those assessments of particular interest to you, or to inform you of the status of a particular assessment. It provides directions on how to obtain more information about an assessment and its associated documents from contact persons in the specific responsible authority.

Purchasing of products containing post-consumer waste and/or products which are environmentally sound

Report has been prepared for the Corporation of the City of Toronto and other participating cities and agencies ; by John Manuel and Lawrence D. Ludlow. Toronto : M.M. Dillon Ltd., 1990. i, 153 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-07012 (2 fiche)

This study identifies products routinely consumed by municipalities which could be purchased containing post-consumer waste and/or which are considered environmentally sound. The study includes information on the source and proportion of recycled material used in the item, the reason why the product is considered environmentally sound, and product specifications. The study also identifies factors such as cost, quality, availability, recyclability, degradability, and potential economic impacts for each of the products. In addition, the study gathered information on programs dealing with environmentally sound products and indicates, where possible, the suitability of the identified products with respect to those programs. The study develops a strategy for product certification to provide a system to verify claims regarding post-consumer material content of products and estimates the ratio of wastes that could be recycled or diverted from landfill if environmentally sound products are used. A list of manufacturers and distributors is appended.

Q-learning for learning-to-control agents

MICROLOG 95-07455 (1 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

A prevailing problem in most cases of human decision-making is the choice between identification and control, i.e. between deciding whether to improve knowledge of a situation or to take the best action based on past experience. There is growing interest in developing learning-to-control agents for the two classes of decision tasks characterized by that problem. Q-learning, one of the most studied reinforcement-learning algorithms, has been successfully applied to simple learning-to-control tasks. This paper presents the concepts of reinforcement learning, and Q-learning in particular, and addresses the state of the art research issues associated with the scalability of Q-learning with respect to real-world sequential decision tasks. The report reviews papers on Q-learning and identifies open research problems within Q-learning. It then reports research work that aims to overcome these problems in the context of two applications: real-time process control and cost-effective classification.

La production canadienne de porc a connu une croissance considérable ces 10 dernières années. Cette revue technique examine la situation. Le chapitre premier traite de l'identification de la viande PSE/DFD. Le chapitre 2 examine les problèmes que pose le traitement de la viande de porc des différents groupes de qualité. Le chapitre 3 porte sur la conservation de viande PSE/DFD vendue au détail et le chapitre 4 sur sa palatabilité. Le chapitre 5 traite de la sensibilité du stress, qui fait l'objet de recherches intensives, principalement en Europe. Les méthodes autres que les tests à l'haltane qui ont été employées pour identifier les porcs sensibles au stress sont passées en revue au chapitre 6 et l'identification du gène qui transmet la sensibilité au stress chez les porcs porteurs est mentionnée plus particulièrement. Le chapitre 7 traite des facteurs qui interviennent entre le moment où l'animal quitte la ferme et l'abattage, facteurs dont l'influence sur la qualité de la viande a été prouvée. Enfin, le chapitre 8 traite des facteurs post-mortem qui ont des effets sur la qualité du muscle.

This report presents the results of a study examining the combined effects of aircraft type and atomizer on the deposit of a simulated insecticide spray. The study involved six trial spray applications made along a single flight line using a Grumman Avenger equipped with Teejet 11010 hydraulic nozzles and a M18 Dromader equipped either with a Sargonair high-speed rotary atomizer or a Micronair AU4000 system. The investigators assessed spray deposition on foliage simulators deployed within the forest canopy up to a distance 400 meters downwind of the spray line. The results presented include comparison of the spray systems used, the deposited droplet spectrum obtained with hydraulic and rotary atomizers, spray deposit intensities, and mass deposit profiles.

The commercial fishery for geoduck clams began in British Columbia in 1976 and has since grown to be the major invertebrate fishery in value and (since 1991) second to red sea urchins in landings. Individual vessel quotas have been in effect since 1989. There is concern that the fishery is depleting the most accessible stocks of the highest quality. This report outlines management options for the geoduck fishery, presents a range of geoduck biomass estimates and harvest rates to date, and provides recommendations for quotas for the latest year's geoduck fishery.

The aim of this study was to investigate lung cancer risk among workers with radiographic silicosis in comparison with a sample of workers with normal radiographs. This report presents the results of the study, noting the difference in mortality and cancer incidence experience between the workers with abnormal radiographs and those in the control group. The report also discusses the effects on the results of taking into account differences in smoking behavior between the two groups, and for the case of miners, the effects of adjusting for radon daughter exposures. In addition, industry sectors where lung cancer risk was elevated among silicotics are identified.

Multiprocessor architectures offer integrators of realtime systems numerous advantages not found in single-processor systems, but also present a special set of problems to designers of realtime operating systems. This report focuses on multiple instruction/multiple data execution, where processors run freely except for explicit synchronization. The report identifies four models of parallel computation: the shared-memory model, the thinwire model, the networked computers model, and the intermittently connected computers model. These models abstract aspects that significantly affect application program design, and the report discusses these program development issues. The report also examines Harmony, an inherently multiprocessor multitasking realtime operating system, in the light of those models.

Lake St-François is the first widening of the St Lawrence River in Quebec. The lake is bordered by vast wetlands noted for their wide variety of wild-life habitats; control structures built in the 1930s to regulate flow have considerably reduced the flood-plain and modified the lake's flow pattern. This report reviews the characteristics of the lake, including physical environment, vegetation, aquatic organisms and wildlife, and human occupation. It then summarizes human activities affecting the lake and the effects of such activities as industrial and municipal effluents on the aquatic environment. The report ends by assessing the environmental situation of the lake and outlines measures toward sustainable development of the lake area. ### Répertoire Énergide : cotes de consommation énergétique des principaux appareils ménagers, 1995

Ottawa : Ressources naturelles Canada, 1995. xx, 120 p. : ill. Bilingue (Energide directory...). ISBN 0-662-61786-X GCC-E no M27-103/1995 MICROLOG 95-07459 (2 fiche)

Le Programme Énergide est conçu pour aider à choisir les appareils électroménagers qui utilisent le moins d'énergie. Il vise deux objectifs : protéger l'environnement en réduisant la consommation d'électricité au Canada, et aider les consommateurs à faire baisser leur facture d'électricité. Sept principaux classes d'appareils électroménagers ont été soumis à des tests normalisés qui servent à mesurer leur consommation d'électricité : réfrigérateurs, congélateurs, appareils de cuisson, lave-vaisselle, laveuses, sècheuses, et laveuses-sècheuses superposées. Les résultats obtenus permettent de comparer la consommation d'électricité des différents modèles possédant des caractéristiques semblables, lorsqu'ils sont utilisés dans les mêmes conditions. MICROLOG 95-07312 (1 fiche)

This report presents the findings of an investigation of the growing problems of maintaining and sustaining on-call coverage of emergency facilities by family physicians in small hospitals in rural Ontario. The report begins by reviewing the social and economic environment of health care in Ontario and assessing the mood of the central participants in the health care system (physicians, hospital boards and administrators, and the community). The report then provides an introduction to current rural practice in Ontario, noting the deterioration in health service supply and the areas requiring policy reform. Other issues addressed include funding, fee-for-service, recruitment and retention of physicians, and the role of the rural community. The report ends with chapters on solving the problems noted and on proposals for finding the money to fund rural health services.

Interdepartmental Steering Committee for the Review of Seniors Care Facilities (Man.). Winnipeg : The Steering Committee, 1995. 46 p.

The Manitoba government established an inter-departmental committee to identify opportunities to better coordinate the continuum of services provided to seniors; to review existing legislation, policies, and regulations with respect to personal care homes and residential care facilities; to identify possible measures to inform Manitobans about care, service levels, and facilities; and to identify opportunities to enhance community involvement in provision of care to seniors. The committee's investigations included a review of government policies and practices, meetings with residents in personal care homes, and meetings with and submissions from organizations with an interest in personal care facilities. This report presents the results of the committee's work and its recommendations in such areas as staffing, funding, medical care, standards, compliance, complaints and incident reporting, assessment and admission, and public education.

The Pinecone Lake-Burke Mountain Study Area covers 38,000 hectares south of Garibaldi Provincial Park in British Columbia. The area, or parts of it, has been considered for protection since the early 1900s yet has also been the focus of resource extraction. A study team met in 1993 with a mandate to seek a resolution of the competing interests in the Study Area (governments, industry, labor, conservation groups, and native groups). The team collected information relating to the resources of the Study Area and held a series of open houses to seek public input and solicit opinions on the Area's future. This report presents the results of the team's work, including a description of the Area's resources (natural, cultural, and economic), the criteria used to determine how well an area fulfills the goals of the province's Protected Area Strategy, options considered for public review, and recommendations regarding establishment of protected areas.

The February 1994 workshop on measuring biodiversity for forest policy and management had the purpose of collectively creating an approach to measuring biodiversity in forested ecosystems. The workshop consisted of group discussions and circulation of six manuscripts that provided the background and focus for the discussions. This paper reviews the proceedings of the workshop in terms of how the components of biodiversity were defined and addressed, and the overall successes and failures encountered. Those components, each the subject of a manuscript, were genetic level, population level, community/ecosystem level, and landscape level. The other two manuscripts addressed the question of scale across all four components and dealt with policy issues from a national and global perspective.

The present report translates the findings and directions presented in that report, as tempered by input from public meetings, written submissions, and client meetings, into a set of recommended retail objectives and policies together with their supporting rationale. This report summarizes retail trends and their implications as found in the earlier report, identifies and discusses issues raised in the submissions such as demographic shifts and deregulation of suburban markets, outlines the municipal interest in retail planning, and presents the retail objectives and policies. It then compares these to existing policies in the regional and Ottawa Official Plans and proposes changes to those plans.

Indicators of SLM can be grouped into four categories: physical, agronomic, economic, and social. This report reviews some indicators of SLM and assesses selected indicators using 1991 Census of Agriculture data. The indicators were selected on the basis of criteria from the literature as well as availability of data. Examples of indicators having the potential for use in SLM are cropping intensity, nutrient budgets, yield variability, windbreak density, crop influence on soil quality, summerfallow trends, gross margin with and without government subsidies, and debt load.

This report presents results from a study carried out to provide information on the distribution and relative importance of VOC in 18 tributaries located in and around the Montréal region. This region was selected for the study because of the known association between population centers and sources of VOC. The researchers sampled the tributaries for 20 compounds using headspace gas chromatography/mass spectrometry. The results include annual and daily load, by substance, and the contribution to the load from each tributary. The researchers also correlated VOC contributors with the Entraco potential toxic contribution index and the Chimiotox index. The report also discusses the effect of ice cover on the intercompartmental exchange of VOC.

The Role of secondary school department heads in facilitating curricular change

States that society is changing as we move towards a post-modernist society, and that schools, and what constitutes relevant knowledge and skills, will also have to adapt to the basic structural changes occurring in society. While elementary schools have been encountering such changes for the last 20 years, similar pressures are now being faced by secondary schools. Explains that the means to facilitate secondary school change has become a topic of discussion both in the academic literature and in school systems, with department heads being cited as key players in facilitating the changes required. Since little research is reported on how department heads have perceived or performed a change agent role, this study attempts to address this issue through an investigation of 15 schools in

1 Ontario school board. Examines whether department heads understand the curricular changes facing secondary schools and what role they perform in facilitating the change process in their respective departments.

Backbenchers must deal with complex and often conflicting conceptions of their role and duty as partisan politicians, ombudsmen for their constituents, and legislators. This paper offers a brief introduction to the position of backbencher in the Ontario legislature and their role in the legislative process. This report summarizes a comprehensive review of published knowledge regarding legislation, enforcement, reinforcement and education as tools for influencing road user behaviour in pursuit of safer travel. General models of behaviour change and those directed specifically to health-related behaviours are addressed. The purpose of this project was to review the literature documenting scientific research and theory on changing the behaviour of road users. This was in support of the goal of advancing practical understanding of what works and what does not work in influencing road user behaviour, and why. About 1000 recent research reports, articles from technical journals, books, and book chapters were examined. These documents included evaluation reports, reviews, scientific theories, and practical models of behaviour-change methods and applications of these methods. An approach to planning coordinated influence programs is presented.

The Saanich Inlet Study has the goal of determining the sensitivities of the inlet to contaminants and marine habitat disturbances. The result will provide baseline information that will aid in reviewing development proposals in the area surrounding the inlet. A public hearing process is a key component of the Study. This report summarizes the open house (public hearing) process, methods used to collect public input, and results of the input as obtained in two open houses held January 1995 at the Institute of Ocean Sciences in North Saanich and Brentwood College in Mill Bay. Information contained in the results includes the uses of the inlet, what parts of the inlet are used, valued characteristics of the inlet, changes observed in the inlet and their effects, future changes foreseen, and ways of protecting sensitive uses in the inlet.

This report outlines the results of a four-week consultation process and cultural resources overview study carried out within the context of the Saanich Inlet Study, which was initiated by the British Columbia government to produce baseline information on the assimilative capacity of Saanich Inlet. The consultations were with First Nations inhabiting the inlet area and involved obtaining their views on the uses, values, and expectations for the inlet environment. In addition, the study documented historical, existing, and future uses of the inlet, based on First Nations testimony and the archaeological record. The report includes descriptions of First Nations cultural history and archaeological resources in the inlet area, recommendations regarding aboriginal resources, and an appendix describing place names attributed to cultural resource sites of the Saanich, Malahat, and Cowichan First Nations.

This paper considers infinite-dimensional perturbations in all constraints of an optimal control problem governed by a Volterra integral equation with the presence of a state constraint. Those perturbations give rise to a value function, whose analysis through the proximal normal technique provides sensitivity, controllability, and even necessary conditions for the basic problem. The paper relates the information about the value function to the Clarke normal cone of the function's epigraph, which can be characterized by the proximal normal formula. PR PS QU SC

In North America, oriented strandboard (OSB) is used as a major web material in prefabricated joists. Web openings are often required for passage of conduits and ventilation systems. Current standards consider the effects of web openings on shear strength of the joist empirically but not analytically. This study investigates the effects of web openings on the shear strength of OSB web I-beams, identifies possible failure mechanisms, and recommends analytical design criteria. The experimental program consisted of testing three sizes of simply-supported beams under a single point load. Test parameters included the hole width and height, shear span length, and hole corner radius. The results reported include an analysis of failure modes, effects of variations in the studied parameters on beam shear strength, and accuracy of analytical predictions of shear capacity.

A silviculture prescription is a site-specific plan that describes the forest management objectives for an area. A prescription prescribes the method for harvesting the existing forest stand and a series of silviculture treatments that will be carried out to establish a free growing crop of trees in a manner that accommodates other resource values as identified. This document describes the contents of what silviculture prescription plans must contain in British Columbia to comply with the Forest Practices Code. It includes information on general requirements for the plan as well as specific requirements for tenure identification, management objectives, degree of consistency with other plans, ecological and resource information, forest health assessment and prescription, soil conservation, actions to accommodate forest resource values, silvicultural systems, harvesting, fire hazard abatement, silviculture treatments, stocking standards, and mapping.

A Simple optimality cut for integer linear programs

By Gilbert Laporte and Frédéric Semet. Montreal : Université de Montréal, Centre de recherche sur les transports, 1995. ii, 5 p. : Bibl. (Publication / Université de Montréal. Centre de recherche sur les transports ; no. 95-46) MICROLOG 95-07426 (1 fiche)

Several classes of integer linear programs can be successfully solved by branch and cut algorithms. Most constraints generated within these algorithms are feasibility cuts, which cut out parts of the feasible domain of the linear relaxation without removing any feasible integer solution. Optimality cuts make use of information provided by the objective function and may truncate the feasible domain. Both types of cuts usually increase the value of the lower bound provided by the current relaxation. The purpose of this paper is to propose the penalty cut, a simple optimality cut of general applicability in integer programming which is easy to derive and can be applied to both pure and mixed integer linear programs. The paper describes the derivation of the cut and includes a numerical example.

This report represents a descriptive profile of a number of social and economic trends in Metropolitan Toronto. It includes census and other statistical information, plus analysis and perspectives at the area municipality level. After a Metro overview, the chapters of the report cover East York, Eto-bicoke, North York, Scarborough, the City of Toronto, and York. Each chapter includes a general overview of the municipality and a discussion of local conditions within the context of such principles as minimum living standards, safe and healthy living environments, equality of access to opportunities and benefits, opposition to discrimination, providing a sense of ownership and identity, and the importance of assessing social benefits and consequences of all plans and policies.

Hydroacoustic Technology's model 240 echosounder represents the state of the art in split-beam hydroacoustic technology. The split-beam technique provides several advantages over traditional echo sounder design, including the ability to accurately estimate target strength and to track and enumerate salmon as they migrate upstream. This report describes two software packages developed to help process and analyze the large volume of data produced by the model 240 system. HAFU is a DOS-based set of file management utilities able to deal efficiently with large amounts of data from numerous files. QTS is a Windows-based set of S-Plus routines primarily designed to graph data, but which also provide options for producing summaries of fish passage and for editing data interactively. Both programs are menu-driven. The report explains how to use the software and includes sample screens.

This guidebook provides guidance to forest workers on acceptable levels of soil disturbance in order to ensure that the physical, chemical, and biological properties necessary for maintaining the long-term productivity of forest soils are protected, maintained, or enhanced. The guidebook explains practices regarding permanent and temporary structures that give access to the forest (such as roads and buildings), indicates how much of a site can be occupied by such structures, and shows how to estimate the area occupied by those structures. The guidebook also recommends limits for soil disturbance within the net area to be reforested and forest floor displacement within that area.

Some properties of the bilevel programming problem, existence and applications

In this paper, the general standard bilevel programming problem is reformulated as a one-level programming by considering the value function defined by the second-level problem. The paper presents results on the conditions assuring the non-emptiness of the set of solutions to the second-level problem and studies the properties of the multifunction which associates the set of solutions for the follower to each fixed strategy of the leader. The paper also shows why the problem has a non-convex nature in an appropriate sense and identifies a very small class of such problems which are convex. Two existence results are stated and two significant examples are given. The paper then formulates the general multi-level problem and examines an example. The final section applies a discrete Lanchester model in an advertising competition problem and includes computational examples.

The South Fredericton Aquifer has been tapped as a municipal water supply source since the early 1950s. Contaminants could reach the Aquifer with the natural groundwater flow, notably where the near-surface groundwater system becomes affected and where the confining clay/silt layer is absent or very thin. This report presents the results of a study of the protection of the Aquifer, with the intent to designate an appropriate protection area and to institute controls within its limits as required to adequately protect the Aquifer from contamination and from unregulated withdrawals. The protection areas are proposed based on criteria including calculated travel time within the Aquifer, the presence of confining clay, and location of property lines. The report includes evaluations of potential threats to the Aquifer, an aquifer protection plan, an approach for regulating land uses that may affect the Aquifer, and an implementation and management plan.

This document reports results of a study of lake water samples collected at various sites on the Canadian Shield and re-analyzed in order to determine whether losses of calcium and alkalinity had occurred. Storage periods were from two to six and a half years. Magnesium and pH were also redetermined. Measurement of those parameters is important for studies in support of geochemical exploration, studies of the buffering capacity of lake waters in the Canadian Shield, and acid rain studies. The results indicate the reasonableness of expecting meaningful data for calcium, magnesium, and alkalinity based on the analysis of stored lake water samples.

A stand management prescription is a document for describing actions to be carried out on a free-growing site to see that stand management activities are planned and implemented to maintain or enhance site productivity, to ensure that resource values are identified and taken into account, and to set out a series of stand management activities to produce a stand that meets the management objectives. This guide provides a logical sequence of steps on how to prepare and administer a stand management prescription in accordance with the Forest Practices Code of British Columbia. These steps include identification and collection of background information, setting of stand-level resource objectives, conducting fieldwork, preparation of the final prescription, production of the stand management prescription map, and administration.

Herring are an important component of the British Columbia commercial fishery with catch records dating from 1877. Since 1983, herring fisheries have been managed with a fixed quota system in which catch levels are determined prior to the season based on a fixed percentage of forecast stock abundance. This report presents stock assessments from escapement and age-structured analytical models that were developed explicitly for B.C. herring. Both models reconstruct stock abundance from 1951 to last year and forecast pre-spawning abundance for the coming year. Forecasts of recruit spawners are presented as poor, average and good, based on historical recruitment levels. The report does not discuss the development and evaluation of empirical models for forecasting recruitment.

This report presents a simple and cost-effective study design to assess the effects of concrete median barriers on wildlife along multiple lane highways in southern Ontario. The effects on mortality of key wildlife species along Highway 401 were to be determined by designing a road-kill study implement-able by highway maintenance crews, with the possibility of expanding the study to other highways and/or addressing other possible effects on wildlife. The report discusses the wildlife species, issues, and hypotheses of particular interest, then summarizes current knowledge of roadway barrier effects on wildlife mortality, movements, and species diversity. The proposed study design is based on collection of road-kills for a minimum of five years from selected 2-kilometer stretches of highway with and without concrete barriers, and is focused on 14 species of medium and large sized mammals including valuable game and fur-bearing species.

Optical signal processing is being pursued to use the inherent speed and parallelism of optics for the enhancement of electronic signal processing. Optical processing is more appropriate than purely electronic processing in applications requiring high throughput of information such as in radar electronic support measures (ESM). This report reviews and compares three technologies for use in modern radar signal processors: fiber optic architectures, folded spectrum architectures, and acousto-optic architectures. The report includes short reviews of various one- and two-dimensional acousto-optic processors and a mathematical analysis of the sensitivity and dynamic range of the space- and time-integrating processors in terms of specified requirements. The report concludes with a recommendation regarding the preferred technology for future studies and hardware implementation.

In November 1991, Forestry Canada initiated a study to determine the effects of canopy cover on the growth response of treated stands in the understory. The purpose of the study was to address concerns regarding the effectiveness of precommercial thinning or spacing, a labor-intensive and relatively expensive operation, on residual understory resulting from harvesting practice that left standing those species for which there was no current market. This paper reports the results of that study, conducted at a site in New Brunswick that had been harvested in the 1970s, with hardwood and unmerchantable softwood left standing. The study examined the effect of crown closure of various intensities on the growth response of overtopped individuals of the understory softwoods, and the degree of crown closure that can be tolerated while still achieving an acceptable response from the treated stand underneath.

Describes the level of implementation of each of the 5 components of the existing role for the resource and withdrawal teacher. Gathers information about the suitability of the current resource and withdrawal model, and examines strengths of the model as well as obstacles to its full implementation. Intends to gather data that could be used for making informed decisions. Outlines roles of resource and withdrawal teacher, and presents questions used to guide the study, methodology, and findings (Questionnaires and logs). Includes tables to illustrate findings and sample logs to illustrate the type of responses submitted.

Reports on research which explored the impact of a systemic approach to facilitating deliberative reflection as a means for schools to deal with the changes they face, including curriculum decision-making. The research was undertaken over a 2-year period with teams for a family of 10 schools. Three factors seem to have interwoven to create a climate supportive of deliberation. These factors were closely linked with systemic change as they entailed alterations to a variety of roles and organizational structures within individual schools and the larger unit of which they were a part. Examines in detail each of the factors (school families, emphasis on school-based deliberation, and content design and support associated with the professional development program), together with their contributions to creating opportunities and expectations for deliberation among school teams.

The purpose of this study was to identify a cost-effective technology for salt removal from washwater waste streams at highway maintenance patrol yards. This document presents a detailed review of technologies for the removal of total dissolved solids from salty wastewater. These technologies include evaporation (atmospheric evaporation, vacuum distillation, mechanical vapor recompression evaporation), membrane processes, and freezing. The document assesses the technologies according to criteria such as scale of operation, technical status of the process, insensitivity to total dissolved solids, concentration of fuel water, pretreatment requirements, product water recovery, produced water quality, energy consumption, and maintenance requirements. Finally, the document identifies the most appropriate technologies for developing a liquid concentrate using the volumes and concentrations of waste streams studied.

Theory and computer simulation of the interactional neural network

By E. Porada, M. Rioux and Pierre Boulanger. Ottawa : National Research Council Canada, Division of Electrical Engineering, 1989. v, 23 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-06945 (1 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

This paper solves the problem of finding a weight matrix that solves a sequence of equations with positive coefficients, for a given sequence of associations which are pairs of binary vectors. The paper states the condition for existence of the weight matrix and finds the solution in an explicit form. If the matrix is implemented as a connectivity pattern (a matrix of connection strengths in a two-layer neural network), then the unidirectional associations are executed infallibly. The paper includes the FORTRAN programs and description of a computer simulation of the neural network based on the weight matrix. The algorithm producing the weight matrix can be implemented in the form of a self-programming of the network. Such implementation requires a layer of hidden neurons. The paper presents the three-layer mathematical and interactional model and the process of self-programming.

A Three-year business plan, 1995-96 to 1997-98

Alberta. Alberta Health. Edmonton : The Ministry, 1995. 35 p.
MICROLOG 95-06934 (1 fiche)

This Alberta Health business plan identifies goals, strategies, targets, and performance measures through 1997-98 to streamline and integrate the province's health system. In general, the health system will operate on a regional basis to provide treatment services and emphasize healthy behaviors to prevent, delay, and reduce the effects of illness. The plan also describes the environmental context, financial plan, anticipated characteristics of the health system, and proposed performance measures. This document outlines plan strategies and measures under four goals: maintaining a continuum of affordable, accessible, and appropriate high-quality health services; increasing the ability of Albertans to lead healthy and independent lives; increasing financial contributions based on ability to pay; and increasing the ability of health system partners to demonstrate accountability for the use of health resources and outcomes achieved.

Hexazinone is a herbicide used to control weeds prior to establishment of softwood plantations. In Nova Scotia, hexazinone is generally applied at least two weeks before planting to avoid crop damage. This paper reports results of a study undertaken to determine the applicability of this two-week guideline for different softwood species and soil characteristics. The trial encompassed five different sites, with treatments repeated three times on all but one of the sites. Treatment levels ranged from zero to 14 liters per hectare, applied by a sprayer. Within each treatment block, ten trees of each of six species (spruces, fir, and pine) were planted and the planted trees were evaluated for survival, damage, and growth in the fall of the year following treatment.

The British Columbia Energy Council published a provincial energy strategy in 1994 containing recommendations intended to move British Columbia toward energy sustainability. In response, the Ministry of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources coordinated an interministry review of the Energy Council's recommendations. This document summarizes those recommendations and describes provincial government initiatives to move British Columbia toward energy sustainability. The report reviews activities to implement key areas of the proposed energy strategy in such areas as climate change and greenhouse gas management, sustainable energy supplies, energy for buildings, district energy and cogeneration, energy from wood residue, and energy planning. An appendix lists each Energy Council recommendation and the specific government response.

The Alberta government established the Care Settings Review Committee in 1995 to conduct investigations and develop recommendations to protect patients and health care workers from infectious blood-borne diseases, to retain public confidence in the current system for controlling the spread of such diseases, and to provide safeguards for the confidentiality and safe employment of health care workers affected by such diseases. The Committee consulted with experts on the medical, scientific, legal, and ethical dimensions of these issues, and also solicited views from the public and from professional licensing bodies and associations. This report presents the Committee's findings and recommendations in the areas of risk of disease exposure in the health care workplace, human immunodeficiency virus notifiability, improving guidelines for infected health care workers, risk reduction, and public protection. The appendix includes a directory of information sources on blood-borne infectious diseases.

The object of this study was to develop data to support the exclusion of ammoniacal preservative systems from the current high-density incising requirement for western white spruce in the American Wood Preservers' Association C2 standard. This standard was based on the available data on the treatability of western spruces with chromated copper arsenate, which does not penetrate spruce as well as the ammoniacal preservatives. The investigators incised and commercially treated end-matched samples of spruce from six sawmills with one of two preservatives, ammoniacal copper quat or ammoniacal copper citrate. This report presents the results of the study, noting the degree to which the ammoniacal preservative treated lumber met the C2 standard at conventional double- and single-density incision densities.

Laminated root rot, caused by the fungus Phellinus weirii, is the most serious root disease affecting coastal Douglas fir in British Columbia. Post-harvest stump and root extraction is the most effective method of quickly reducing the residual fungal inoculum on affected sites. This report presents results of trials conducted to evaluate an alternative strategy, push-over logging or push-falling, in which whole trees are pushed over by a suitably equipped excavator and then skidded to a landing where root masses are cut off and stems are bucked into logs. Researchers documented all seven activities comprising the push-falling operation using video and measured the productivity of push-falling by detailed timing and shift-level monitoring. The report includes discussion of push-falling costs, comparison with conventional harvesting, safety aspects, and operating constraints.

In response to an Alberta accident involving a collision between an oil tank truck and a freight train, the Transportation Safety Board recommended that provincial authorities require that tank trucks placarded for the transport of dangerous goods stop at all public crossings before proceeding. As a result, Transport Canada conducted a study of truck acceleration times across a test area simulating the crossing and clearing of one to four sets of railway tracks. The study was performed to ascertain the time for a truck/trailer to accelerate from a stopped position to a fixed distance further down the road. The time-to-distance analysis is used to determine whether the truck/trailer can successfully cross an at-grade railway crossing within the railways' 10-second sight-line rule for visibility at road/railway crossings in Canada. This report presents the results of the truck/trailer acceleration trials.

In view of the recent increase in the number of tuberculosis (TB) cases reported in the United States, leading to concerns among health care workers, this study was undertaken to determine whether relevant TB data from Ontario hospitals were available, and if so, whether evidence of work-related tuberculin skin test conversions could be documented. The study surveyed occupational health departments from 14 Ontario hospitals and used the data from one hospital that provided TB test data for all employees. Employees undergoing skin test conversions were identified and exposure was estimated. The study followed 809 skin-test negative employees for 2,084 person-years and conversion rate results are reported, along with the estimated conversion risk associated with work-related exposure factors.

Although the delivery of oxygenated water to salmonid eggs and larvae buried in river gravel is critical for their survival, intragravel flow rates have been infrequently measured because of the complexity and time-consuming nature of the techniques that have been developed. This paper describes modifications of a previously developed technique that makes use of the dilution of a salt solution from a standpipe buried in the river bed. The new flowmeter is lightweight and enables rapid determinations of intragravel flow. The flowmeter was calibrated in an experimental flume and the report presents functions for the automated processing of field measurements using the device. The report also describes a piezometer for measurement of the hydrostatic head associated with salmon redds.

Health care providers are in strategic positions to prevent violence, detect risk and victimization of vulnerable groups, and provide services to survivors of abuse as well as to their assailants. This guide is intended to aid those in the health professions to address violence prevention and the care of abused clients in a matter that is comprehensive in scope, sensitive to the sociocultural, political and psychological roots of violence, attentive to new insights, and humane, caring, and skilled. The guide begins with a concise introduction to the literature on violence and on the essential knowledge, attitudes, and skills for violence prevention and victim or survivor care. It then presents ethnographic examples of abuse situations, each discussing implications for education of health professionals. Final sections of the guide cover implementation issues and strategies for health services, including a comprehensive clinical service for a battered women as an example.

Visibility and ambient aerosols in southwestern British Columbia during REVEAL, part 2 : extension of the source apportionment of ambient aerosols during REVEAL

By Sara Pryor and Douw G. Steyn. Victoria : Ministry of Environment, Lands & Parks, Air Resources Branch, 1994. 54 p. : ill., Bibl. On cover: Fine particulates. CCG-P no. 0-7726-2456-9 MICROLOG 95-07085 (1 fiche)

In response to public concern regarding declining visibility and health concerns associated with fine particulates in the Fraser Valley, the British Columbia environmental ministry funded a project called REVEAL which was designed to characterize summertime visibility and ambient aerosol loading in the southwestern part of the province. This document summarizes the findings of the first report of the REVEAL study, the techniques used for apportioning the pollution sources, notably motor vehicle emissions and wood processing/vegetative burning, and discusses the remaining uncertainties and unresolved issues arising out of the report. Visibility perception in the Lower Fraser Valley

By Sara Pryor, Douw G. Steyn and Kate Stephens. Victoria : Ministry of Environment, Lands & Parks, Air Resources Branch, 1995. 66 p. : ill., Bibl. On cover: Fine particulates. ISBN 0-7726-2512-3 MICROLOG 95-07102 (1 fiche)

This report summarizes a visibility perception study using photographs and optical measurements taken during the REVEAL projects to evaluate a protocol for gauging public perception of visibility in the lower Fraser Valley region and to validate the results of a previous pilot-scale study. The report begins with a review of phenomena associated with visibility perception and a description of the study area and design. The report then presents the results of a survey of five groups in the Fraser Valley. The study technique involved looking at a series of slides in which the scene characteristics are invariant while the pollutant concentrations are varied. The study participants rated the conditions portrayed on a visual air quality scale and also gave their opinions on whether the conditions depicted would violate a visibility standard. BC EV PR SC

Water quality assessment and objectives for Tsolum River basin, Vancouver Island : overview

Victoria : Ministry of Environment, Lands & Parks, Environmental Protection Dept., Water Quality Branch, 1995. xiii, 96 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl. On cover: Tsolum River watershed. ISBN 0-7726-2432-1 MICROLOG 95-07086 (2 fiche)

This report begins with an overview of water quality and water quality objectives in the Tsolum River basin, the hydrology of the basin, water uses in the basin, and activities affecting water quality. The bulk of the report consists of a technical appendix giving similar information as in the overview but in greater detail. This appendix includes results of water quality analyses at specific locations in the basin, heavy metal analyses and mass balance for copper in the vicinity of a former mining operation, and results of bioassay studies. The appendix ends with discussion of water quality objectives, including ecosystem objectives, proposed objectives for copper, and the degree of reduction of acid mine drainage required to meet the copper objectives. Recommendations for water chemistry and ecosystem monitoring are included. BC EV NR PR SC ST

Workplace Health and Safety Agency presentation

To the Royal Commission on Workers' Compensation. Toronto : The Agency, 1995. 16 p. : Bibl. MICROLOG 95-07323 (1 fiche)

This presentation focuses on the fundamental importance of prevention to workers' compensation. It urges that prevention be recognized as the main priority for the Ontario occupational health/safety and workers' compensation system, and emphasizes the benefits of workplace health and safety improvements. The presentation also reviews the role of the Workplace Health and Safety Agency, which was created as an independent body with a mandate for prevention and for funding and overseeing various health and safety delivery organizations in Ontario. The Agency also contributes to education and training programs, whose value in injury prevention are noted. The presentation also proposes innovative policies to promote the Workers' Compensation Board role in prevention and stresses the importance of the Agency's independence in the prevention of workplace injury and illness.

A World review of strategic silvicultural planning processes that have potential for application to British Columbia

By E. John Hammons and Hugh G. Marshall. Victoria : Canada-British Columbia Partnership Agreement on Forest Resource Development: FRDA II, 1994. vi, 35 p. : Bibl. (FRDA report / Canada-British Columbia Partnership Agreement on Forest Resource Development: FRDA II ; 223 ISSN 0835-0752) ISBN 0-7726-2301-5 MICROLOG 95-06892 (1 fiche)

This report reviews strategic silvicultural planning processes in New Zealand, Sweden, Chile, and the United States south and Pacific northwest to identify tools, techniques, and approaches that could have value for silviculture in British Columbia. The regions reviewed have emphasized incorporating economic considerations related to wood quality into strategic silvicultural policy, with an increasing emphasis on growing quality sawlogs. For each region examined, the report describes end-products and silvicultural regimes, the forecasting of supply and demand, and (for some regions) the forecasting of domestic and global prices. The report concludes with a description of strategic silvicultural planning in British Columbia, including use of the SYLVER computer model, and a discussion of global forest sector modelling.
